Pastor To End 28 Years' Service in City Sunday

Rev. Schillinger To Preach Last Sermon Here, Then Take New Post.

Sunday will bring to a close the 28-year pastorate of Rev. James W. Schillinger of the Emanuel Lutheran church and mark the beginning of a four-year term as president of the Ohio district of the American Lutheran church.

At 10:30 a. m. Rev. Schillinger will deliver his farewell sermon and at night at 7:30 he will be installed as district president. Dr. E. Poppen of Columbus, president of the American Lutheran church, will deliver the sermon at night.

This week has been one of the most arduous in Rev. Schillinger's nearly 35 years as a minister. Since his election as president last month he has been preparing to end the pastorate which is the longest ever held in any church in Marion.

The last week has been particularly strenuous for, in addition to the usual pastoral duties, he and his wife are moving to their new home at 298 East Dunedin road in Columbus, last night there was a reception in their honor at the church, and there has been a deluge of requests for Rev. Schillinger to baptize children and to give communion to the aged and shut-in members of his congregation. No requests for his pastoral services has been denied by Rev. Schillinger in this last week with the Emanuel people.

"It has been the happiest period of my life, the golden age of my life and its richest period of my ministry," Rev. Schillinger said this week of his 28 years with the Emanuel congregation.

Elected Unanimously

Rev. Schillinger will enter on the heavy duties as district president confident that it was the will of God which called him. "It wasn't my wish or my desire," he said, speaking of his election at the recent district convention. The election was unanimous.

The Emanuel congregation expressed the same thought in the formal resolution releasing him: "We acknowledge that the unanimous choice of our pastor by the Ohio district for this important office is the voice of God calling him . . . and while we greatly regret to lose the services of our pastor, we nevertheless in humility yield to what we are convinced is the will of God."

As president of the Ohio district Rev. Schillinger will be superintendent of the 195 Lutheran churches in Ohio and "pastor of pastors" to 205 ministers in the district, including several who are retired and several of the Capital university faculty.

He will preside at all conventions and in general perform executive duties. At times he will be in the position of mediator.

There will be few times during the four-year term of president when he will be at home, he said. His important duties will take him out into the district virtually all of the time, and he expects at the end of two years to have included in his work a visit to each of the churches in the field.

Teaches Class 28 Years

Rev. and Mrs. Schillinger will retain their membership in the Emanuel church until the end of the year. Sunday also will bring to a close Mrs. Schillinger's 28 years as teacher of the Mission Girls Sunday school class of girls from 18 to 24 years of age.

Building of the present edifice on South Prospect street Rev. Schillinger holds to be one of the crowning achievements of his ministry and to many of his congregation it is a monument to his service.

When Rev. Schillinger was installed as the Emanuel pastor on Advent Sunday of 1909, the congregation was worshipping in the old Emanuel church at South State and Columbia streets, dedicated in 1886. The building now houses the First Church of the Nazarene congregation.

Two years later the twenty-fifth anniversary of the dedication of the church was celebrated. A steady growth in church and Sunday school membership demanded large quarters and on Feb. 21, 1916 the William Muntsinger property on South Prospect street was purchased at a cost of $8,000. Five days later a finance committee

FALL ELECTION DRIVE STARTS

PARTIES MAP CAMPAIGNS

Republicans Open Headquarters in Federal Savings and Loan Building.

The Republican organization and party candidates for municipal offices in the November election formally opened their fall campaign yesterday and last night.

Meanwhile, campaign workers in both major political parties continued to spread a warning that Monday will be the last opportunity for registering and transferring registration. Hundreds of persons will not be eligible to vote in November unless they register before the deadline, election officials said.

Republican headquarters on the third floor of the Marion Federal Savings & Loan Co. building were opened yesterday with Mrs. Paul Reynolds in charge. The rooms will be open daily as campaign quarters until the election. Office hours are 9 a. m. to 11:30 a. m. and 1 p. m. to 4 p. m. The telephone number is 3161.

To Meet Again

Last night, 60 central committee members and precinct leaders met at the headquarters for a session called by Bud H. Lawson, chairman of the Marion County Republican central and executive committees, and Mayor Frederick C. Smith, head of the party's municipal ticket. Arrangements were made for another meeting Tuesday night to map details of the campaign.

Meanwhile, Dr. C. J. Altmaier, chairman of the Marion County Democratic Central and Executive committee, said no plans have been made for a formal campaign and that the Democratic party headquarters on the third floor of the Marion National bank building may not be opened this fall.

Principal campaign activities, he indicated, will consist of weekly meetings of the Marion County Democratic club, headed by Herbert R. Krebs. Mr. Krebs said weekly meetings will be held, beginning Monday night with Forest Smith of the Baker Wood Preserving Co. as the principal speaker. Candidates will be introduced and given an opportunity to speak, he said. Members will discuss the question of whether a big party rally should be held before the November election.

Monday Is Deadline

As the Monday deadline for registrations for the Nov. 2 election approaches, business at the board of elections is picking up slightly as 26 more persons filed transfers and 11 other registered. The totals now are 55 registrations and 151 transfers since the city primary in August.

The board's office above the Marion Federal Savings & Loan association on East Center street will be open all day tomorrow until 9 p. m. and all day Monday until 6:30 p. m.

Monday will also mark the beginning of the period during which citizens may vote by absentee and disabled voters ballots, C. G. Ritzler, deputy clerk, said. The ballots will be ready Monday when the office opens at 8:30 a. m. Applications for the absentee ballots may be filed now.

CONN FUNERAL CAUSES NO LAG IN KILLER HUNT

Wheeling Salesmen Quizzed as Search Continues for Bird and Brady Gangsters.

BULLETS, PRINTS TESTED

Six Patrolmen Act as Pallbearers at Cumberland With Burial in Zanesville.

By The Associated Press

CADIZ, O., Oct. 1—The funeral today of State Highway Patrolman George Conn caused no relaxation of the exhaustive hunt for his gangland slayers.

Three Wheeling, W. Va., paint salesmen were questioned. The hunt continued for the desperate Brady and Bird gangsters. Tests were underway of bullets, fingerprints and of the soiled yellow cloth which covered the body.

"The investigation will proceed indefinitely without interruption," declared Capt. George Mingle, leading the inquiry.

Study All Leads

"We are running down every possible angle no matter how remote it seems, and ultimately we are going to get the persons who did this. I don't know how long it will take."

Six colleagues of the slain 28-year-old bachelor at the New Philadelphia substation went to Cumberland, O., to act as pall bearers. Twenty highway patrol members who attended the patrol school with him were released for the services (at 2:30 p. m.), with burial in Zanesville.

The West Virginia suspects "happened to be in the same territory the day Conn was killed," Mingle said. "We are simply holding them for questioning."

The three, of 24, 36 and about 40 years of age, were arrested last night at the Coshocton fairgrounds, where they were selling paint.

Birds Still Hunted

"We still figure that the Bird brothers may be responsible," said Col. Lynn Black, chief of the highway patrol.

The Birds—Charles and Frank—and James Widmer escaped at Cleveland a week ago last Wednesday. George Bird, a brother, is held at the Milan (Mich.) federal detention home awaiting return to Cleveland on charges of aiding the trio's flight.

Indiana's Brady gangsters — Alfred Brady, James Dalhover and Clarence Lee Shaffer Jr. — were brought into the inquiry by Capt. Mingle because of their record and their known liking for the middle-west.

Ballistics Expert David S. Cowles tested at Cleveland two bullets removed from Conn's body and a number of shells found in the shallow, grassy ditch near Freeport, O., where Conn was discovered Tuesday, slain nearly a day before and his cruiser driven three miles from the scene and abandoned.

Declaring that his investigation was incomplete, Cowles reported that at the present time he has "nothing to say."

Among new reports under investigation today was that of Don Whitacre, Barnesville truck line operator, who was en route to Canton with William Harris, livestock buyer.

Whitacre said he saw Conn talk-

State Holds Up Counties' Share of Sales Tax

Marion, Morrow, Union and Hardin Denied Part in Distribution Today.

Marion county was among 45 in Ohio which did not participate in a distribution of sales tax funds today by the state auditor as a result of failure to complete arrangements for paying bills owed the state for care of county mental wards in state hospitals. Marion county would have received a check for $6,616, The Associated Press reported.

Other nearby counties which were denied checks include Morrow, $670; Union, $927, and Hardin, $2,287. Checks for the following amounts were sent to Crawford, $5,015; Delaware, $1,976, and Wyandot, $1,571.

Under Provisions of Law

The money is being withheld under provisions of a new state law which requires counties either to pay their bills to the state in full or make arrangements to pay on the installment plan.

Marion county owes the state $57,420.29, a bill which has been piling up since 1931, records of County Auditor Harry V. Mounts show. Mr. Mounts has declared it is impossible for the county to raise sufficient funds to pay off the debt by taxation within the 10-mill limit.

He and his staff are at present working on a study of state-county financial relations in an effort to determine how much the state owes to the county. The state is indebted to the county for prosecution of criminal cases involving state laws, for part of the salary of the county health commissioner and for other miscellaneous sources.

Will Report Results

If and when the study is completed, Mr. Mounts plans to submit the results to the state auditor, provided it shows a balance due the county.

In June the county's sales tax also was withheld but was released in July by a ruling of the attorney general who held that the state auditor must give counties a 30-day notice before holding up the distribution. The notification was given to Marion county officials of today's action.

In the state 43 counties shared $696,610. The total amount withheld is $472,288.

MEDIUM INCOMES MAY BE TAXED MORE

Treasury Believed Considering Expanding Revenue from Middle Bracket.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1—Speculation over the question of whether the treasury will seek heavier taxes centered today on possible higher levies against individuals and corporations with middle-bracket incomes.

An indication that the treasury is considering expanding this revenue channel came from Rep. Celler, Democrat of New York, after he and Morris S. Tremaine, New York State comptroller, conferred with Undersecretary Roswell Magill.

Celler said Magill had mentioned lifting middle-bracket income tax rates as a means of bolstering revenues.

Magill did not detail the brackets which might be affected, Celler said. Middle-bracket incomes, however, generally are regarded as those between $10,000 and $50,000. Surtax rates on these now range from 7 to 31 per cent.

Upper Sandusky Speeds Plans for Corn Husking

Two views of the 100-acre field near Upper Sandusky in which the state corn husking contest will be held are shown above. The top photograph shows part of the field with shocked corn, to be used in one division of the contest, in the background. Also shown is part of the race track of the Wyandot county fairgrounds which adjoin the field. In the lower photograph Noble Bennett, left, and Arthur Traxler, right, both of near Sycamore, are shown as they completed cutting 200 shocks of corn in the contest field this week in preparation for the state's top-flight huskers.

Preparations Made To Entertain 35,000 in Annual State Contest Oct. 27; 100-Acre Field Chosen for Standing and Shock Events.

Special to The Star

UPPER SANDUSKY, O., Oct. 1—This Wyandot county seat community is bustling with activity in preparation to play host to approximately 35,000 persons at the eighth annual state corn husking contest to be staged just north of here on Wednesday, Oct. 27.

Committees already have spent several weeks of work in planning accommodations for the thousands of visitors expected for the event, and officials are predicting it will be one of the most successful state contests ever held, from the standpoint of the spectators, provided the weather is agreeable.

The contest is sponsored annually by the Ohio Farmer, a magazine, and the committee in charge of selecting a field have pronounced the 100-acre tract picked for the 1937 contest to be one of the best they ever saw. To this advantage is added the availability of the Wyandot county fairgrounds, on which the corn field borders, with its acres of parking space, buildings for preparing and serving meals on a wholesale basis, and with the grandstand near the field providing an ideal spot for the crowd to rest while it watches the weighing of the corn to determine the order in which the contestants finish.

Ground Is Prepared

Two hundred shocks of corn were cut this week in the contest field in preparation for the shock corn division of the contest. The cutting was done by Noble Bennett and Arthur Traxler, both of near Sycamore, for the contest committee.

Visitors will get a hearty welcome from Upper Sandusky residents, because the whole community is making every effort to provide for their comfort and entertainment. Preliminary work isn't entirely in the hands of a small committee but is being shared by a large group of clubs and organizations, headed by the Chamber of Commerce.

Approximately 80 top flight corn huskers, selected from the cream of the state's county champions of 1937, are expected to compete. The number will be divided equally between the standing corn contest and the shock corn contest.

Activities will begin with a parade at 10 a. m. of the teams that will haul wagons to be used by the standing corn contestants. At 11 the huskers will swing into action and ply their skill for exactly 80 minutes, the contest being scheduled to end at 12:20. Then every one will adjourn to the weighing equipment to determine the winners.

Tentative plans for the program call for talks by Guy Miller and C. W. Hanmans, rural economics department of Ohio State university, who will give some pointers on the present outlook for corn and its use as feed on the farm.

L. P. McCann, specialist in animal husbandry will judge a horse show in connection with the parade of teams before the contest. Some of the best teams in Ohio are expected to take part in the show and then pull wagons for the huskers.

Exhibits to show the benefit of hybrid corn and of the use of lime on Ohio farms will be among the Ohio State university displays on the grounds. Earl Jones, extension agronomist at the university, says many persons regard lime as being useful only in helping to get stands of clover or alfalfa but that tests have proved corn yields are increased when lime has been used in the rotation preceding the corn.

Although state champions will be chosen in both shock and standing corn, only the two high men in the stalk husking event will go to the national contest, there being no national event for shock huskers this year.

Method of Scoring

To score the huskers fairly, the ears that they overlook and the husks that they fail to rip from the ears they have husked will be charged against them. The rules provide that three times the weight of the marketable corn overlooked by the huskers will be deducted from the gross weight of the corn they have husked. Gleaners will follow each husker to gather the marketable ears he has overlooked. When the corn is weighed, the stray husks left on the ears will be removed and weighed. If they weigh only five ounces, no deduction from gross weight of the husked corn is made, but above that limit one per cent of the gross weight is deducted for each ounce up to and including nine ounces. If a husker is careless enough to get beyond the nine-ounce limit, three per cent is to be deducted for each additional ounce. The huskers then will be scored on the net weight of their corn after these deductions have been made.

It will take a small army of persons to operate the contest. There must be a driver for each team used in the standing corn contest. It is expected approximately 175

Radio Address on K. K. K. Charges Like President's Chats on Vital Issues.

SPEAKS AT FRIEND'S HOME

Will Reply to Those Who Challenge His Fitness To Serve on Supreme Bench.

(Editorial Comment on Page 6)

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1—Justice Hugo L. Black, entering already into the nationwide dispute over President Roosevelt, will bring to an unprecedented climax tonight the nationwide dispute over his appointment to the supreme court.

He will reply in a radio broadcast at 9:30 p. m., Eastern standard time, to those who have challenged his fitness to serve on the tribunal because of what they allege to be his affiliation with the Ku Klux Klan.

He will speak from the living room of the modest home of a friend in Washington's Chevy Chase section.

This was announced today as Black and his friends completed plans for the unprecedented address.

At Hamilton Home

The justice will speak into microphones set up in the living room of the home of Mr. and Mrs. Claude E. Hamilton Jr. on quiet Tennyson street.

Hamilton is general counsel for the Reconstruction Finance Corp. and he and his wife have been friends of the Blacks "for a long time," Mrs. Hamilton said.

Soft-voiced Mrs. Hamilton said she was quite excited by the prospect of having the speech made from her home.

"I think it will be very historic and interesting," she said.

"Never in the history of the court has a justice thus carried his case directly to the people."

Many guessed that Roosevelt's mistake that slighted one of the Klan has been made by President Roosevelt, who has outlined in "fireside chats" the plans and policies of his administration. Once he made a direct appeal for support of his court reorganization program.

Carried By Three Nets

Three national radio chains will carry Justice Black's speech, making it available to approximately 285 stations. The content of the address remained a closely guarded secret, known only to Black and a few of his close associates.

It was considered highly possible that he would discuss directly the allegations of klan membership. The question remained, however, whether he might make a complete denial or whether he might say that he once had been a klansman but long since had renounced his membership.

The principal accusation made in a series of newspaper articles is that Black is a life member of the order. The articles alleged he joined the klan in Alabama in the days before he was elected a Democratic senator from that state.

There was no evidence that Black has any notion of resigning his place on the bench, on which he is expected to take his seat Monday.

The justice continued in seclusion today, presumably making final revisions on his speech.

Announcement of the broadcast was made by Kenneth H. Berkeley, the National Broadcasting Co. Washington manager, who said that Black may speak from his office in the supreme court.

Fire Marshal Drops 33 Including Bucyrus and Mt. Gilead Men.

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 1—Forecasts of empty state offices unless several departments receive more money soon for operating expenses came today from department heads who said many employes might have to be furloughed.

The state fire marshal's office already has discharged 33 field representatives, leaving only 10 persons to conduct the office, Marshal David L. Rockwell declared that the action would have "a tremendous bearing upon the fire insurance rates on all insurable property in this state."

Rockwell said he would urge Gov. Martin L. Davey to include a request for funds in his call for a special legislative session on relief sometime this month.

A utilities commission statement said that "the appropriations made for this commission are not sufficient to pay salaries in full for the balance of the year. All employes will be given a leave of absence (starting Dec. 15) without pay."

CITY SCHOOL BOARD TO STUDY BUDGET

Date For Public Hearing on Estimate of 1938 Needs To Be Set Monday.

The annual budget of the city school system is being drafted and will be submitted to the board of education for discussion and tentative approval at the board's monthly meeting Monday at 4 p. m. at the school administration building, Frank C. Gegenheimer, clerk of the board, said today.

A public hearing date on the budget will be fixed at the meeting Monday. The final approval of the board will not come until the hearing is held, Mr. Gegenheimer said.

After the budget is approved by the board it will be submitted to the county auditor who will present it to the county budget commission later this fall along with budgets of other subdivisions of the county for use in drafting new tax rates for the December collection.

The new tax rates will not be determined, however, County Auditor Harry V. Mounts said, until the reappraisal of real estate is completed, several weeks hence.

The budgets contain statements of the amounts of money which the various taxing subdivisions estimate will be needed to operate during the coming year.

Salem Evangelical Church At Beech Prepares To Observe 100th Anniversary of Its Founding

Program Will Mark Century for First Church of Denomination in County.

Salem Evangelical church at Beech community eight miles east of Marion, regarded as the mother church of Calvary church of Marion from which the Oakland and Greenwood churches grew, will begin a celebration Tuesday commemorating the one hundredth anniversary of the founding of the Salem congregation.

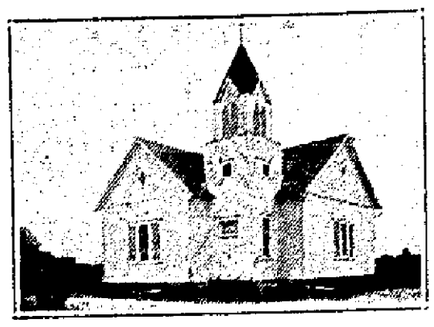
Rev. C. A. Ramey, who lives at the church parsonage at 588 Mt. Vernon avenue, has arranged for a series of commemorative services which will continue through Sunday, Oct. 10.

Since 1921 Salem church has been the lone survivor among a group of five rural churches which were in existence in Marion county in 1860. At that time there was no Evangelical church in Marion city and the total rural membership was 223.

Today there are three large churches in Marion and only Salem church in the county, and the membership approximates 2,000. The territory formerly supplied by the rural Evangelical churches is now supplied by other denominations.

History Matches County

The history of the Evangelical church in Marion county is only one month younger than the county itself. One month after Marion county was formed the name of Rev. Jacob Klinefelter, an Evangelical minister, was added to the roll of the pioneer settlers. Two years later, in 1826, he moved his family from Pennsylvania and homesteaded three miles south of Marion. It was on the Klinefelter quarter section that the first place of worship was erected by the Salem people. Descendants of Jacob and Susan Klinefelter are still among the active Evangelicals in the county.



The Sandusky circuit was organized in 1827 and it was during its duration that the Evangelical church was founded in all the northern part of the state, from Cleveland west and into the Michigan conference. The circuit disappeared from the church records in 1831 and since then has been divided and sub-divided until from its original territory there appear on the records some 67 separate fields.

In 1837, eight years after the first Evangelical family, Henry and Elizabeth Delbert Paul, settled eight miles east of Marion, a class was organized, old records show, by an aggressive minister by the name of Rev. Absolom H. Schaffer. Old records indicate that Henry Paul was the first class leader.

Prior to organization of the class and as early as 1831, ministers of the Sandusky circuit had visited the Paul home and at the home of Henry Miller and family who settled in 1830. The Miller home was the scene of a revival in May of 1836, at which time the settlement included the families of Samuel Albright and John and Henry Delbert.

Revival "Breaks Out"

Sixteen new members were received into the class at a revival conducted in 1847 by Rev. Abe Loehner at the John Delbert home. Two weeks later the revival "broke out," according to records, at the Henry Miller home and nearly all of the German people of the Beech settlement were converted. Rev. A. E. Dreisbach held a meeting at the John Delbert home from Christmas of 1848 through the New Year and won 20 converts and 21 accessions.

Beech settlement, named for the numerous beech trees in the vicinity, became an important center of the Sandusky circuit during these years and it was in 1840, that a log parsonage was built, across from the present Salem church which stands at the intersection of the Edison and Klinefelter roads.

The log structure served for 16 years, at the end of which time a frame parsonage was erected. This second parsonage is now the home of Harley Klinefelter. Since 1882 the church has maintained its parsonage in Marion.

In 1851 Salem class erected a weather-boarded log church on land deeded by Henry and Elizabeth Paul to Henry Miller, Jacob Miller and John Delbert, trustees. The first lighting was by grease lamps. Later tallow candles and kerosene lamps were used. A large stove in the center of the building furnished heat.

The old church was divided into two sections with separate doors leading into each. One division was for the men, the other for the women. Original slab benches were later replaced by pews made by Jacob Miller. The pulpit stand was built fast on the rostrum, high and with wings projecting from each side.

Conference in 1858

It was in this house of worship that some 50 ministers of the Ohio conference met in May of 1858, traveling by buggy and ox horseback. Rev. Andrew Swartz who died in 1923 was the last surviving member of this group of early conference-goers.

Not until 1865-67, during the pastorate of Rev. W. H. Peiffer, was the English language introduced in the services and Sunday school held throughout the entire year. Until that time all services were conducted in German.

About 1862 the church caught fire during an evening service but the building was saved after the congregation had quietly left the building under the whispered guidance of the pastor, Rev. Jacob Burkett. In May of 1887, after a Sunday night service, the building caught fire and was razed. The old log parsonage which had been vacated when the frame structure was built, now served as a meeting place. Slab benches had to be piled along the wall when altar services were held and were a safe place for the children while the service was in progress.

A new church was built in the summer of 1868 on a lot across from the parsonage. The land was given to the church by Peter Gable. While the work of finishing the structure was in progress, the new pews were stored in the old log structure and meetings were held in Gable's barn.

Church Divided

On Oct. 25, 1868 the present church was dedicated by Bishop Yeakel who preached in German and William Yost, who spoke in English. It was a plain square structure, facing south, with two doors and no tower or bell. The seats were divided by a middle partition, one side for the men and one for the women. According to church history, "if a man by chance got on the women's side he was politely asked to change his seat."

Thirty-three persons were converted at a revival conducted in 1874 by Rev. Abraham Loehner. The presiding elder, Samuel Hoy, said never in his experience had he seen such a powerful revival, the church history relates.

Not until 1884 was the seating arrangement changed and a one-door entrance made, although a tower and bell had been added several years before. The last change in the structure was made in 1902 when a prayer meeting room was added.

The first Evangelical church built in Marion county was the Schrote church erected five miles southeast of Marion in 1846. The Schrote class was organized about 1830 by Rev. Jacob Klinefelter and circuit pastors.

Salem church was the second and the third was erected seven miles south of Marion by the Bethlehem class, organized in 1857 by Rev. Absalom B. Schaffer. The fourth church was erected in 1870 three miles southeast of Marion on the Richland road by the Canaan class. In 1920 the Canaan class was dissolved and the church was sold.

A number of preaching points were maintained in the county for a period of years. One, the River class, met at the homes of Jacob Smith and Fred Martin on the Whetstone river. The Claus class supported by the Strohman and Clause families, was another. There were also two churches in Big Island township which were formed into a separate mission in 1879 and became the fifth Evangelical congregation in the county.

From the Evangelical churches in the county approximately 26 young men have gone into the ministry.

Above are Salem Evangelical church at Beech and the pastor, Rev. C. A. Ramey of 588 Mt. Vernon avenue. Tuesday the church will begin an observance commemorating the organization in 1837 of the class from which Salem church grew.

America Plays Safe!

Salt Lake City Speeders Cured by Cell Treatment

This is a series of Associated Press articles showing how various American cities are striving to promote traffic safety.

SALT LAKE CITY, Oct. 1.—Here's one judge, who believes a woman's sympathy is the "judgment," is waging a one-woman fight against reckless drivers and speeders.

Mrs. Elizabeth Beck Bosone, probate court judge in Salt Lake City, former state legislator, graduate of the University of Utah and the mother of a 7-year-old son, is a partner, with her husband, in the law firm of Bosone & Bosone.

Repeaters? To Jail.

Motorists arrested for minor speeding violations pay fines of $5 to $25, depending on the circumstances.

Reckless driving fines of $10 to $50 are levied on the offense.

For drunken driving, fines range upward from $100.

"Repeaters," said Mrs. Bosone "go to jail."

During the six months' she's presided over the Utah capital's traffic court, only two repeaters have faced her.

Cuts Speeding Cases.

One charged with speeding a second time went to jail eight days. The other, convicted of drunken driving a second time, got 90 days. Judge Bosone also recommended his driver's license be suspended for life.

As evidence of her success, police records show only 12 persons were arrested as speeders last Memorial day. Formerly 25 to 125 were arrested on that holiday. Similar reductions in reckless and drunken driving cases were reported.

RED LIGHT JAIL

By International News Service

BRIDGEPORT, Conn. — Red lights mean danger but it also meant a six months' probation sentence for Frank Culley, 20, who police said, halted traffic at Main street and Hawley avenue in the early morning with a red signal lantern he obtained at a scavenger party.

ROAD MADE "BUMPY" TO SLOW SPEEDERS

NEWTON, Mass. — Motorists driving along Chestnut Hill road either go slow or run the risk of breaking a spring.

Four-inch humps of tar and gravel have been raised in the road to discourage speeders. The knobs are painted white and signs explain the novel traffic regulators.

At a moderate speed the bumps cannot be felt, but jolts and jars accompany a fast passage.

Your Health

BY DR. R. S. COPELAND

Baby Schedule.

ALL THE infant specialists point out that a well-planned daily schedule for the baby is of utmost importance. It will insure proper health habits as well as progressive growth and development. In addition, let me point out, a well-planned schedule for the baby will lessen the work of a tired mother. She will have more time in which to relax and carry on her many other household tasks.

It is not difficult to plan a workable schedule. Since all babies of a given age require the same schedule, it is possible to work out a standard schedule. If you follow such a plan, you will be surprised to find how well it operates and the many benefits derived from it.

First, lay out the feedings on a four-hour schedule. Do not deviate from this rule unless your doctor advises you to do so. The first feeding should be given at six in the morning.

Before feeding the baby make sure that he is comfortable. It is well to see that he is dry and has a fresh diaper. After feeding, the baby may be permitted to play or kick about in his crib.

It is a good plan to give the baby a bath about 9:30 a. m. The bath may be followed by the 10 o'clock feeding. By this time the baby will undoubtedl be anxious to sleep and, unless disturbed, will do so until the time for the next feeding at two o'clock.

The infant usually sleeps most of the time, but if he does not sleep after a feeding, do not be worried. He will surely sleep after the next feeding. Most of the afternoon is usually passed in this way.

After the six o'clock feeding, the baby should be permitted to kick about and play in the crib. If the bath is not given in the morning, this may be the time for it. Indeed, some mothers prefer to give the bath before the six o'clock feeding. For very young infants, however, I would advise that the bath be given in the morning before the 10 o'clock feeding.

Never become upset if the baby cries and appears restless. In due course of time you will learn to distinguish between the cries of pain, discomfort, restlessness and hunger. The cry of hunger is naturally heard around meal time.

If the child is in pain it will be more of an angry cry, high-pitched and severe. This cry is difficult to control and is never quieted by a bottle. Persistent crying of this sort demands investigation. Make sure that the baby is not lying on creased blankets or on an open pin. If it persists, call your doctor.

Answers to Health Questions

Mrs. D. H. Q.—Is it advisable for a patient who is inclined to have bronchitis to live near salt water or would it be best to live near fresh water? The trouble is slight.

A.—Under such circumstances a high, fairly dry and temperate location would be preferable. Dampness should be avoided.

Mrs. P. E. Q.—My husband, who is 68, has a crusty eruption on the forehead about the size of a green pea. It does not seem to spread but itches and burns and when the scab or crust falls off, it leaves a sore, angry-looking spot. The patient suffered a fractured skull some time ago but this does not seem to cause any trouble. What is your advice?

A.—This may be due to a form of eczema. For further particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question. Your doctor should see it and advise you more definitely.

In the third round [illegible] schedule, Edison will clash with Vernon next Thursday afternoon.

Dwight Strauss kicked off for Central to start the ball game and it took the team but two plays to score over the first touchdown after receiving an Edison punt on the Edison 39-yard line. A line plunge gave Central five yards and on their try a pass, Strauss to Gilbert was completed for the first touchdown. Strauss added the extra point by driving through the center of the line.

A recovered fumble set up Central's second scoring opportunity shortly after the kick-off after the first touchdown. Edison's team made a single try at the line after receiving but the costly fumble was recovered for Central by Beatty. A short pass behind the line, Strauss to Creasap, gave the ball lugger a broken field and Central's right half twisted and dodged 45 yards to the second touchdown. The line try for the extra point failed.

During the remainder of the game, the clubs battled on fairly even terms, with several touchdown possibilities going astray when fumbles in scoring territory changed possession of the ball. Lewis, diminutive Edison halfback, and John Edington, quarterback, were the heaviest and most consistent ground gainers of Coach Carl E. Brickley's combine.

An estimated crowd of 400 spectators, largely pupils from the competing schools, witnessed the game. The start of the game was delayed slightly when transportation for the Central team did not arrive on schedule and members of the team walked to the stadium. The lineups follow:

MARIONITE MAY GET O. N. U. GRID CALL

Harry Winters Likely To Start Against Denison Tonight.

Likelihood that a Marion athlete will be one of three Ohio Northern university sophomores who will receive Coach Harris Lamb's starting call when the Polar Bears invade Granville tonight for an Ohio conference game with Denison university was mentioned in a news release from Ada today.

Harry Winters, former Harding High school athlete, and now a sophomore at Northern, is expected to be in the backfield when the Polar Bears oppose Denison's Big Red eleven. Winters, together with George Conrey and William Howison, two other Marion athletes, took part in Ohio Northern's opening game victory over Findlay last Saturday.

Wesleyan Grid Star Makes A Dare—and Loses

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 1—The infant football season, only a week old, has produced more chuckles than some entire campaigns and somehow or other Ohio Wesleyan figures in most of them.

Remember last year we Wesleyan played Cincinnati on a rain-swept and muddy gridiron and Mike Caputo of Cleveland, Bishop sophomore tackle, ruined a Wesleyan touchdown by dragging down his own teammate after that mud-covered player had snared a Cincinnati pass?

Well, Caputo now a junior, is in the news again...this time for not making a tackle.

It was in that 59 to 0 rout at the hands of Pittsburgh last Saturday...and Caputo was getting "cocky" as the Wesleyans braced for several minutes and held the Pittsburghs in check.

On defense, Caputo waved his arms at the Panthers and taunted them with, "Well, come on you guys! You're national champs, aren't you? Why don't you run a play through here?"

And the next play went right over Caputo for 48 yards and a touchdown with Dick Cassiano, the sensational sophomore, getting the first of his four markers on the jaunt.

Caputo, flat on his back as the Pittsburgh flash skidded by, mumbled, "well, I asked for it."

LITTLE WORLD SERIES COMEDY OF ERRORS

Birds came out ahead in a strange eleven-inning engagement. The score was 5 to 4, the same as that by which the association champions won the opener Wednesday.

A crowd of 17,347 saw the game which had everything any one could expect from a ball game.

All five of Newark's misplays were damaging ones, a Columbus player being helped along toward a score with each of them.

Babe Dahlgren, originally a first baseman who was turned into a third sacker, made two on batted balls and both men who got on base through them eventually scored. Alley Donald, the International's No. 1 pitcher who lasted only six innings, and centerfied Bob Seeds combined to give a gift run to Justin Stein through two wild heaves made in trying to pick him off the paths and Seeds later committed a miscue which placed the man who tallied the winning run in scoring position.

First baseman Dick Siebert of Columbus also made two errors both were on drives hit by the Bears' first baseman, George McQuinn—which resulted in scores. Jimmy Jordan, ex-Brooklyn, second baseman, made the Red Birds' other misplay, his second of the series, but it did not damage.

Dahlgren's two fumbles made his total three for the two games in 10 chances, while Seeds had but one putout to match against his two blunders. Shortstop Nolen Richardson and pitcher Joe Beggs were charged with the other Newark errors.

Besides those for Jordan and Siebert, Columbus black marks were against catcher Jack Crouch and Stein.

The Red Birds mixed 19 hits, 10 of them last night, with the Bears' faults to get their 10 runs Newark collected 16 hits, eight in each game.

Named to pitch in the final game in Newark tonight were Morton Cooper, a righthander, for Columbus and Vito Tamulis, a southpaw for the Bears.

O. S. U.-PURDUE TILT TOPS WEEK-END LIST OF 23 OHIO GAMES

Boilermakers Seeking Revenge for Five Previous Defeats; Wesleyan To Play Dayton.

By FRITZ HOWELL
Associated Press Writer

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 1—Twenty-three college football games—eight with a bearing on conference championships and 15 with out-of-state foes—make up the grid menu for Ohio fans this week-end. Heading the attractions as the season booms into its second week is the Ohio State-Purdue contest at the Buckeye stadium Saturday afternoon.

Five times the Bucks and Boilermakers have clashed on the gridiron, and the Indiana club has yet to score a point, the Ohioans making a clean sweep of the five straight victories. They met last in 1924, however, and since then Purdue has become a power in Western conference circles.

More than 50,000 fans were scheduled to attend the classic. Purdue's outfit arrived in Ohio's capital early this morning, and was due for a workout on the green battlefield during the afternoon. The Bucks, too, were to taper off with a signal drill before going to a country club for the night.

Friday night Ohio Wesleyan and Dayton clash in the Gem city in the Buckeye conference curtain-raiser, while Ohio Northern and Denison meet at Granville, and Wooster-John Carroll at Cleveland in Ohio league frays. The other Friday contest takes Bluffton to Findlay.

While Marietta, Ohio conference champion, meets Miami, co-champion of the Buckeye at Oxford in one of Saturday's features, two champions of other state conferences invade Ohio for tussles with Buckeye squads. Kalamazoo, winner of the Michigan inter-collegiate crown last year with eight straight victories, tangles with Wittenberg at Springfield, while Cincinnati plays host to Butler, the Indiana state champ the last two seasons.

Western Reserve hopes to run its string to 25 without a defeat by trimming Hillsdale, Mich., at Cleveland, while Hiram's squad, loser of 17 in a row, will try to break that string as it entertains Mount Union.

Wooster takes on a brand new foe in John Carroll. The Wooster football teams have played 284 games since inaugurating the sport with Denison in 1889, but Friday night's contest is the first between the Scots and John Carroll.

Xavier's fine team takes on a stellar foe in the University of Kentucky, with the Musketeers granted an outside chance to win. Other battle on the Saturday slate include Capital at Case, Bowling Green at Baldwin-Wallace, Heidelberg at Kent State and Otterbein at Kenyon in the Ohio conference; Western Kentucky industrial at Wilberforce, Georgetown at Toledo, Wayne at Akron, Rochester at Oberlin, Muskingum at W. & J., Ashland at Alfred, Detroit Tech at Defiance, and Alfred Holbrook at Earlham.

Ohio State in 25th Year in Big Ten Grid League

BY FRITZ HOWELL
By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 1—Ohio State university breezed into its 25th year as a member of the Big Ten this season, but the Buckeye athletic officials were so intent upon building the 1937 edition of the football team that they entirely overlooked the anniversary and planned no ceremonies of any kind commemorating the event.

George M. Trautman, president of the American association, and Ernest R. (Ernie) Godfrey, assistant coach to Francis A. Schmidt, didn't overlook the anniversary, however, for they were the first and second-string centers on the 1913 club that launched the Bucks into the Western conference grid wars.

Godfrey, who at 135 pounds was the smallest center Ohio State ever had, and Trautman looked back over the quarter of a century of football, and attempted to outline the greatest changes that have taken place. Their powers are indicative of the courses their lives have followed since they graduated.

Godfrey, who stands out as one of the finest defensive ends he's in the U. S. has been a football man every day since he left the Ohio playing ranks. He said:—

"There is no difference between the football of 25 years ago and that of today. The game still is a matter of blocking and tackling, no matter what innovations are introduced. Show me a team that wins games, and I'll show you a team that can block and tackle. The fundamentals still win the ball games—and they always will."

Trautman, who has switched to the professional side of sports, and has a watchful eye on the gate at all times, said:—

"The big difference between football of 1913 and football of 1937 is the size of the crowds. Back on old Ohio field, when we first joined the Western conference, a crowd of 5,500 or 6,000 was tops. Today a crowd of 40,000 is a poor one in the Buckeye stadium and we have had as many as 90,000."

Oberlin, 0; Ohio State, 0

Godfrey calmes in with: "Back in the days before we got into the Big Ten we had a tough time beating the little Ohio colleges, but once we entered the big league our teams got better. That first year, after losing the close one to Indiana, and a 12-0 game to Wisconsin, we came back to beat Northwestern 55-0. Wish we could do that to those Wildcats, now.

"That same year we had a tough time beating Western Reserve 13-8; Oberlin held us to a scoreless tie, and we beat Case 18-0. We've come a long way since those days."

NINE BIKE OWNERS REGISTER WHEELS

Record is Police Aim To Halt Increase in Thefts Here

Cooperating with efforts of the Marion police department to halt an increased number of bicycle thefts, nine owners of wheels registered voluntarily at the traffic bureau office in the City building yesterday afternoon, Police Chief Ralph Gorrell said.

Police have taken no active interest and completed investigations of the cycle registered with their names and addresses at their request to aid in establishing a record of identification system.

The progress of the registration which is in compliance with a city ordinance, is considered a step toward the solution of a problem that is a matter of concern to police and to owners of bicycles alike.

Bicycle owners may call at the police office at their own convenience to register the machines. There is no charge for the registration, which has been arranged recently as a service to owners and to assist police in identifying stolen bicycles or those which are found unclaimed, Police Chief Gorrell said.

FULL PAY ANTICIPATED IN 1938 CITY BUDGET

Finance Program Drafted on Basis of Restored Salaries, Full 8 Months' Work Time Assured This Year.

A city budget for 1939 calling for full pay in relation to 40 per hour salary scale in effect the first half of the year and for a new assessment of the duplicate equivalent to the 1938 valuation of the property plus what will be up to the Indiana commission at that time, is being prepared by the city controller as a guiding rule.

The budget as it will be presented to the public officials and council before it goes to the state board of tax commissioners, probably the first half of the following month, is expected to show that the city will be able to operate on a budget not to exceed $1,000,000 for the year, it was said by Controller Ralph Kinnard.

A public conference with the state tax commissioners regarding assessed valuations for the purposes of the budget as mandated with the law governing the same for 1939 budget year will be held in the city council chamber on the fifth floor of the city building, it was announced.

The budget will be based on the assessed valuation of the property as determined by the state board of tax commissioners, Controller Kinnard said.

The Stars Say—

For [illegible]day Oct. 4

A DAY OF outstanding possibilities for progress and marked success is presaged by the dominant rulership of major planets. There are promises of opportunity and openings of paramount importance in enhancing fortunes and prestige. These are attended by sudden developments and possible strange denouements to the established order. There are some exacting or frustrating conditions to cope with by subtlety, diplomacy or secrecy. Speculation thrives and friendship and personality have a major influence in these happy prospects.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a year of excellent openings for signal success, achievements, stability, enhanced fortunes and expansive personal gratifications. Major events with radical changes, are imminent, silent with certain perplexities to be confronted by tact, subtlety, or probably collusion. Speculation and quiet contacts flourish. Popularity and friendship from large in the affairs.

A child born on this day may be especially endowed for a brilliant record both in its business and private affairs. It may have [illegible] talents and should be adventurous and creative, at the same time romantic and ideal.

NINE BIKE OWNERS REGISTER WHEELS

Respond to Police Plan To Halt Increase in Thefts Here.

Cooperating with efforts of the Marion police department to halt an increased number of bicycle thefts, nine owners of cycles appeared voluntarily at the office last night to register their vehicles. Each gave police the serial number and complete description of the cycle together with their names and addresses as they became the first to assist in establishing a record of Marion-owned cycles.

The purpose of the registration, which is not compulsory, is to establish the identity of a bicycle so that it can be recognized definitely by the owner in case it is stolen and to assist officers in locating the owners of recovered cycles. The registration was begun to curb a recent increase in the number of bicycle thefts.

Bicycle owners may call at the police office at their own convenience to register the vehicles. There is no charge for the registration, which has been developed entirely as a service to owners and to assist police in identifying suspected stolen bicycles or those which are found abandoned, Police Chief Marks said.

Judge Martin withheld a decision at the close of the case yesterday. Carhart, Warner & Carhart represented Mrs. Jenkins and Atty. George Geran was counsel for the defendant.

FULL PAY ANTICIPATED IN 1938 CITY BUDGET

Financial Program Drafted on Basis of Restored Salaries; Total Is $29,579 More Than Received This Year.

A city budget for 1938 calling for full pay to replace an 85 per cent salary basis in effect this year and for a new automobile in the police department and one or two new trucks in the city garbage department was set up by the finance committee of city council at a meeting last night.

The budget, as it will be presented for a public hearing and council action on Oct. 11 at 7:30 p. m. calls for $901,927.77 for municipal operating expenses for next year. This is $11,963.07 less than the city asked a year ago for 1937 operating expenses and is $29,579.77 more than was allowed for that purpose in 1937 by the county budget commission.

A $12,000 reduction this year in the annual street lighting contract accounted for the decrease in the budget as compared with the one prepared last year for 1937. Otherwise, the budgets for the two years are the same with minor exceptions.

Of the $29,579.77 increase in the 1938 budget as compared with the amount the city was allowed for 1937 by the county budget commission, approximately $15,000 is accounting for by the request for full restoration of salaries.

The finance committee estimates it will take in $92,960 next year from the various municipal departments and a number of sources of revenue paid directly into the city treasury, such as liquor licenses. Consequently, the committee asked the county budget commission to allow the city $797,967.77. The sources of this revenue are gasoline, real estate taxes, state sales tax and the special six and one-half mill levy for firemen's and policemen's salaries, which will run through 1938.

The budget does not contemplate any extensive change in the setup for operating the various city departments. The committee merely assumes that Marion will continue to have a combined safety and service director, no special police prosecutor and no extra clerk in the municipal court administration having been made last year in these three departments.

The budget will be turned over today to City Auditor J. L. Landes and be available for public inspection until the public hearing at which time any person can voice objections or suggest changes. After the hearing, the budget will go to council for final action. It then will be sent to the county budget commission consisting of the county auditor, county treasurer and prosecuting attorney to be used along with budgets of other governmental and school district subdivisions in making up real estate tax rates for the December, 1937, and June, 1938, tax collection periods.

OHIO P.-T. A. OFFICIAL SPEAKS AT SCHOOL HERE

Instruction Session at First Reformed Church Sponsored by City Council of Organization.

"Recreation is the enjoyment of worthy cultural use," Peter of Toledo, recreation director for the Ohio Congress of Parents and Teachers told a group of approximately 40 members of the Marion Council of Parent-Teacher associations at this morning's session of a school of instruction at the First Reformed church.

Mr. Petree drew from his own experiences as a parent and from years of experience in recreation fields for his talk on "And the Merry-Go-Round Broke Down."

Claiming that "artificial inhibitions have made us the most unhappiest people in the world," Mr. Petree asserted that the spirit of hospitality is developed in the home and urged that parents endeavor to train their boys and girls in the art of being hospitable.

Cause of Broken Homes

Causes of broken homes he laid to a lack of uniform purpose among the inmates, the lack of a positive attitude rather than the negative habit of attempting to attain goals by constant "don'ts," and an unwillingness to overlook the "little things" which often assume overwhelming proportions.

Mr. Petree contended that to get a uniform spirit in the home there should be no restraints in discussing family problems with the children—that children should share in the depression years and curtailed activities as fully as they should share in the delightful years of prosperity. He chided the business man too busy making money for a rainy day to have fun "because the rainy day is going to find them lonesome for the kiddhood they missed."

Cliques the small groups which exists for only social reasons and which will not do the work and which cannot be digested.

Mr. Petree suggested that recreation include songs—good parodies—and various contests to make crowds and break up the cliques.

"The unbounded leadership is astounding in our Parent-Teacher organization," he said in speaking of the tendency on the part of many parents to join in the activities. He strongly advocated community parties and a community "play night."

Mansfield Woman Here

Mrs. J. W. Hasbrook of Mansfield, nominated for presidency of the North Central district, talked to the women on the structure of the Parent-Teacher association, its laws and by-laws committees, officers and their functions and in general, presented the women with a working picture of the organization.

Mrs. David H. Peterson, president of the Marion council, presided this morning. Community singing led by Mrs. Eugene H. Moore with Mrs. Raymond Acker at the piano, and invocation by Rev. J. A. Carriker of the Forest Lawn Presbyterian church preceded Mrs. Peterson's greetings to the group.

Following luncheon at noon at the church, the women presided to hear Supt. C. A. Hudson speak on "Significant Trends in Education" an address on "Family Good Times" by Mrs. R. G. Williams of Columbus, state specialist in education for family living and a talk by Mrs. Andrew Rawson of LaGrange district president, on "Projects for the Year."

The all-day program, in charge of Harold Bill and two leaders, will include group and team games of capture-the-flag, basketball, volley ball, softball, football, relay races and track events.

The Glenwood, Mark and Silver street teams won in the first round of the softball league games yesterday, by the following scores: Mark 7, North Main 2; Glenwood 22, Oakland 1; Silver 17, Oak 5. Drake, pitcher for Glenwood, allowed only three hits. Owens, Anderson and Benson were the Oakland batteries. Daniel and Harbolt were the heavy hitters for the Mark Street team. Batteries were Mark, Miley and Brady, and North Main, Sutterman and Walters. Lowry and Cockerel were the battery for the Silver street team and Harvey and Hindman were the Oak battery. Williams and Miller of the Silver Street team and Long and Walters of the Oak street team were heavy hitters.

Supervised Games

JACK DOYLE'S LOVE QUOTED 2 MILLION

Film Star Asks That Amount as Balm from Mrs. Godde.

By The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 1—Two million dollars—and that's a low high even for Hollywood—is the asking price today for the love of pugilist Jack Doyle, the "Irish Ingman."

It will take at least that sum and film actress Judith Allen says, as alienation suit against Mrs. Delphine Dodge Cromwell Godde, to compensate for loss of Doyle's affection.

Miss Allen is Doyle's wife. He has been granted an interlocutory decree of divorce from the ring's fair, but it has not been made final.

Her complaint alleges Mrs. Godde, one of the world's richest women, employed "wiles and means" plus several hundred thousand dollars to lure her husband away and prevent a reconciliation.

Mrs. Godde and Doyle announced here last week they planned to leave within a fortnight, for England, where she would seek a divorce from Timothy Godde former New York banker.

The Stars Say—

For Sunday Oct. 2

A DAY OF outstanding possibilities for progress and marked success is presaged by the dominant rulership of major planets. There are promises of opportunity and openings of paramount importance in enhancing fortunes and prestige. These are attended by sudden developments and possible strange denouements to the established order. There are some exciting or frustrating conditions to cope with by subtlety, diplomacy or secrecy. Speculation thrives and friendship and personality have a major influence in these happy prospects.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a year of excellent openings for signal success, achievement, stability, enhanced fortunes and expansive personal gratifications. Major events with radical changes, are imminent, albeit with certain perplexities to be confronted by keen analysis or probably collusion. Speculation and quiet contacts flourish. Popularity and friendship form large in the affairs.

A child born on this day may be unusually endowed for a brilliant record both in its business and private affairs. It may have oratorical talents and should be adventurous and creative, at the same time romantic and loyal.

...ORTH CHURCH TO BE REDECORATED

Work Already Started in Renovating Main Auditorium of Building.

Work is underway preparatory to the redecorating of Epworth M. E. church with funds from the first two payments of the "penny shares" financial campaign.

Scaffolding was erected this week in the large auditorium and as soon as the walls have been washed and repairs, such as plastering of cracks in ceiling and sidewalls, have been made, the redecorating will be started.

It is hoped the redecorating will be completed in a period of two weeks.

The first two "penny shares" payments gave the church approximately $2,300 for the work. The shares were sold for $3.65, payable quarterly.

With the redecorating program underway, there will be no services in the main auditorium for the next two Sundays. Morning and night worship services will be conducted in the intermediate department room which will seat approximately 300 persons.

Sunday school for the adult department will be held in the intermediate room. For the class period all adult department classes will assemble in the regular class rooms with the exception of the Powell and Smart classes which will meet in the intermediate room.

Pupils of the intermediate department will assemble and conduct their program in the kindergarten room in the east part of the church basement. The kindergarten children will assemble and hold their services in the cradle roll room. The junior and primary departments will continue in their regular quarters.

Dr. Edward T. Waring, pastor, has asked that members observe the special arrangements which have been made for the services.

KENTON RESIDENT CLAIMED BY DEATH

Special to The Star

KENTON, Oct. 1—Funeral services for Mrs. Siddie Florence Sutherland, 74, who died Thursday in her home here, will be held in the Porter & Son funeral home at 2:30 p. m. Saturday. Burial will be in Grove cemetery.

A native of Logan county, Mrs. Sutherland had resided in this community for more than 50 years. She is survived by a son, Harold J. Sutherland of south of Kenton; one daughter, Mrs. D. T. Thompson of Mt. Victory; a sister, Mrs. Alice Grader of Bellefontaine, and three brothers, B. M. Jewell of Lima, Alonzo and St. Clair Jewell of Bellefontaine.

HUSKERS WILL VIE AT UPPER SANDUSKY

persons will serve as gleaners. Other dozens will help motorists to parking, clean away husks from the cars before the net weight is determined and tow cars ready dozens of other tasks to speed the determination of winners.

If everything works as scheduled, the results of the contest will be learned about 2 p. m. In the time between the end of the contest and the announcement of the winners, the crowd will be entertained by a program provided by the Ohio Farmer. The speaker has not yet been chosen, but may be either a representative of the agricultural department of the Ohio State university or from the Ohio experiment station at Wooster.

Amplifiers will carry the program, announcement of winners and other announcements to the huge crowd.

Location of Field

The contest field is bordered by two state routes—67 and 53—and visitors will pour in from all parts of the state on these and routes 30N and route 23. The availability of the field to motorists is regarded by the state committee as a distinct advantage of the 1937 contest, since as compared with some of the previous annual contests.

Four buildings on the fairgrounds will be pressed into service as temporary restaurants, and Upper Sandusky organizations will take over the job of feeding the crowd.

The winners of the contest will get trophies and cash prizes and those finishing in second to sixth places also will get awards.

An abundance of interesting farm exhibits for visitors to inspect while awaiting the announcement of winners is assured. Implement companies plan demonstration of equipment and the agricultural extension service is planning to show a number of exhibits from Ohio State university.

The Chamber of Commerce, headed by W. O. Moore, superintendent of schools, started a movement a year ago in an effort to have the 1937 contest held in Wyandot county. This gesture led to the inspection of fields and the final selection of the county.

It will be the first contest ever held in a field of hybrid corn. The 100-acre field, one of the largest corn fields in central Ohio, is owned by Mrs. Mary E. Sampson of Mt. Gilead and is operated by Ward and Arthur Walton, large scale farmers who have approximately 2,000 acres under cultivation. There are no buildings on the farm on which the contest will be held.

The contest will be open free to any one who wishes to attend. A 20-page booklet containing space for the names of the contestants and forms for scoring them in the order they finish will be given away.

National Contest in Missouri

The 1937 state champions will be sent to the national contests to be held in Missouri in November.

Committees looking after preparations for the contest are being guided by Ray T. Kelsey, corn husking contest manager of the Ohio Farmer. O. J. Walker of Upper Sandusky, a fence company representative, is general chairman. Charles Artz cashier of the Citizens Savings bank is in charge of concessions and finances and is being assisted by John Armstrong and Ira Sterner. Rollin Caldwell, a farmer, is in charge of police and parking with the assistance of the sheriff and commanders of American Legion posts of Nevada, Sycamore, Carey and Upper Sandusky and the chairman of the McCutchenville Protective association. D. A. Bloom, a farmer, is arranging for officials and assistants to serve during the contest. Charles Wentz, a horse breeder, is in charge of the horse parade and providing teams for the contest. Harold Cope, teacher of journalism and biology in Upper Sandusky high school, is in charge of publicity and is assisted by Ralph Van Buren, vocational agriculture teacher at Upper Sandusky, Nelson Rall and L. M. Newcomer. Ross Winter, a farmer, is in charge of the grounds, and Oscar Berg, a farmer, is to look after husking equipment.

The state contest this year is expected to attract an unusually large crowd due to the fact that interest in husking competition was heightened last year when the national contest was held in Licking county. The state contest was held in Wayne county last year.

was appointed and in May, J. W. C. Co-buser of Cleveland, the architect, submitted his plans.

Excavating was started on Sept. 3, 1918, and on May 13, 1917 the corner stone was laid. A severe winter and the shortage of labor due to the World war slowed the progress of construction but two years and two days after the work was started the house of worship was completed.

On Sunday morning, Sept. 2, 1918, a farewell service was held at the old church and the congregation, led by Rev. Schillinger, marched in procession to the new church. The dedication offering was more than $4,000.

The church built during Rev. Schillinger's pastorate is considered one of the finest examples of pure Gothic architecture in this vicinity. Following the ancient custom of the church, the general plan is in the form of the cross. The nave of the church forms the body of the cross, the chancel its head and the two transepts the two arms. The cross appears a number of times on the church and its furnishings.

Church Well Equipped

The auditorium has a seating capacity of 650 and the basement, used for Sunday school and social purposes, 600. The windows in the auditorium are all imported, antique glass done in Thirteenth century style. The church also is equipped with a pastor's study, library, kitchen, furnace room and with all equipment of a thoroughly modern building.

Total cost of the church, including the site, was $73,604.92 and today the church has one of the smallest debts of any congregation in the city.

In April of 1922, at a cost of $7,200, a lot on the southwest corner of Prospect and Pleasant streets was purchased, giving the church property measuring 134 by 165 feet. Two months later the contract for the building of the present parsonage was awarded to John Baldauf & Sons of Marion at a contract price of $9,877.

Rev. Schillinger's pastorate also saw the passing of German services at the church. The last German service was held on April 6, 1924, and since that time services have been entirely English.

When Rev. Schillinger became pastor of the congregation the membership totalled 299. Today the membership is 745 and of this number 106 were members when he came to Marion in 1909.

Pastoral records over the 28-year period show that Rev. Schillinger has baptized 501 children and 126 adults, has married 331 couples, has officiated at 342 funerals, has held communion 123 times. During the period communion has been given a total of 28,343 persons.

This year the congregation started a drive to raise $11,000 by September of 1938. The church edifice is free of debt and there is only a small indebtedness on the parsonage. With the $11,000 the indebtedness will be paid off, the church will be redecorated and new lighting fixtures will be installed.

Came from Sandusky

Rev. and Mrs. Schillinger came to Marion from Sandusky where for three and one-half years Rev. Schillinger was assistant to Rev. T. J. C. Stellhorn, present vice president of the Ohio district and still pastor of the Sandusky Zion's church. Prior to his service in Sandusky he was pastor of Trinity church in Willard for three years.

He was graduated from the New Washington High school in 1897, from Capital university in Columbus in 1901 and from the Capital Lutheran seminary in 1904. On May 25, 1904, a week after his graduation from the seminary, he was ordained and took up his work at Willard.

To be a minister was Rev. Schillinger's boyhood ambition, fostered by the natural inclination to follow in the footsteps of his father, the late Rev. Sylvanus Schillinger. He is the fourth generation of a family which settled in Mahoning county in 1799, driven there by religious persecution in their native Wuertemberg, Germany. His forbears were Pietists, persecuted by the state church of Wuertemberg.

"The Holy Scripture is the only authority for us," Rev. Schillinger said of the belief of the Lutheran denomination. Rev. Schillinger holds a firm belief in the infallibility of the Bible and holds the chief duty of the minister to be to "give children a thorough instruction in the catechism."

Two years ago Rev. Schillinger served as first vice president of the Ohio district and several years ago he was president of the North Central conference.

Rev. and Mrs. Schillinger have one son, Stanley, who is office manager for Nestle Milk products in Marysville.

400 Attend Farewell Event

Four hundred men, women and children attended the reception given last evening at the Emanuel Lutheran church for the pastor, Rev. J. W. Schlinger, who has been honored with election to the presidency of the Ohio district of the American Lutheran church and Mrs. Schillinger.

The affair was given by the Women's Missionary society and the Young People's Missionary society and afforded many friends outside the church membership the opportunity of offering congratulatory farewells.

Receiving with Rev. and Mrs. Schillinger were Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Baldauf and Mr. and Mrs. John Siffel, members of the church for many years and close friends of the pastor and his wife.

Baskets of garden and cut flowers decorated the basement room in which the reception was held, and throughout the evening there was music by the Sunday school orchestra under the direction of Probate Judge Oscar Gast. Refreshments were served.

Mrs. Scott Gast, president of the Woman's Missionary society presented Mrs. Schillinger with a green and ivory electric mixer, and Raymond Roecker, president of the Young People's Missionary society presented Rev. Schillinger with a yellow-gold wrist watch. The gifts were bought with funds contributed by the members.

Both Rev. and Mrs. Schillinger gave short acceptance talks, extending to all their friends a warm invitation to visit them in their Columbus home at 268 East Dunedin road.

MARKET SLIPS AS BUYING LAGS

Gold and Copper Shares Put On Lone Performance for Modest Gains.

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, Oct. 1—Buying demand filtered out of the stock market today and, except for modest improvement in gold, copper and miscellaneous issues, the drift was on the downside.

Domestic developments apparently were without important motivating qualities, although revival of talk of a special session of congress tended to stem trading ardor in some quarters.

Bonds and commodities got nowhere in particular.

Inclined to back away most of the time were shares of U. S. Steel common and preferred, Youngstown Sheet & Tube, Inland Steel, National Steel, Crucible, General Motors, Chrysler, New York Central, Chesapeake & Ohio, Westinghouse, General Electric, du Pont, American Telephone, Consolidated Edison, North American, Electric Power & Light, U. S. Rubber, Goodyear, Goodrich, J. I. Case, International Harvester, Montgomery Ward, Allis Chalmers, Union Carbide and Johns-Manville.

Narrow to up a point or so were Homestake, Anaconda, Kennecott, Cerro De Pasco, American Smelting, United Aircraft, Republic Steel, Bethlehem, Western Union and National Dairy.

A more than seasonal upturn in last week's freight loadings to the best aggregate in seven years failed to brace the carrier stocks to any great extent.

On the side of recovery forces was the week-end survey of Dun & Bradstreet, which stressed the brighter aspects of retail distribution throughout the country.

For the week retail sales were placed at from three to eight per cent ahead of the preceding period and seven to 20 per cent above the same 1936 week.

The review noted an expansion in wholesale demand, with orders including a wider range of merchandise, but found spotty industrial operations in which building construction tapered and steel mill activities dipped.

The report showed an attendance of 237 scouts at the camp during the summer. It was announced that one lodge will be available for overnight camping during week-ends throughout the fall, winter and spring months and that the camp reservation will be used for hikes and outdoor events. CHINESE AGAIN APPEAL TO LEAGUE

By The Associated Press

GENEVA, Oct. 1—China today flatly asked the League of Nations advisory committee on the Sino-Japanese war, on which the United States is a consultative member, to declare her a victim of Japanese aggression.

The request embodies the draft resolution submitted to the committee by Dr. V. K. Wellington Koo, Chinese delegate to the league, and demanded that the committee:

1. "Condemn the violation of international law and contractual obligations of which the resolution accuses Japan;

2. "Condemn the illegal blockade of the Chinese coasts;"

3. Declare the facts "constitute a case of external aggression."

BRITISH HAIL YACHTSMEN WHO BRIDLED HURRICANE

Endeavour I Reaches Port After Conquering Storm That Swept Skipper Overboard and Nearly Cost His Life.

By The Associated Press

GOSPORT, England, Oct. 1 — The racing yacht Endeavour I, proud and defiant, reached the slip of her berth today, bringing back from the Atlantic one of the most thrilling sagas of the sea this historic English port town ever has known.

Standing on deck as the America's cup challenger slipped through the calm waters of the solent was Ned Heard, Endeavour's 50-year-old skipper, who, 20 days ago, was swept overboard in an Atlantic hurricane, caught a loose wire and pulled himself back to complete the epic 2,700 mile voyage under sail.

For the last 20 miles of the voyage, up through the needles and down the solent, Capt. Heard had nothing to do. The yacht Viva II, from which he cut loose off Nantucket Sept. 13, had picked him up again and towed him home.

Two hours before he arrived Gosport was exulting.

The quayside was strung with Stars and Stripes and Union Jacks. All imaginable types of craft in full dress rig lined the channel.

The British warships moored across the channel dressed the rails in salute, a welcome home to a dainty but seaworthy craft from the mightiest battlewagons afloat.

The first official greeting was given by T. O. M. Sopwith's yacht Philante which met the Endeavour at the channel entrance. Sopwith, the Endeavour's owner, was aboard to welcome the men who sailed with him in a vain effort to bring the America's cup back to England.

As the Viva, with the Endeavour in tow passed the royal yacht squadron at Cowes, the historic club unfurled its flags and paid tribute to what will go down as probably the most famous yacht ever to represent Great Britain in the most famous of racing events on the high seas.

The Endeavour broke away from the towing vessel off the United States coast in a violent gale. For two weeks she was unreported as Capt. Heard fought through the hurricane and then set sail for home.

Endeavour was first sighted off the Irish coast three days ago.

Heard, acclaimed as a modest hero, conceded the hurricane was "pretty bad," but minimized the fury of the storm and his own narrow escape.

"I was not washed clear of the boat at all," he said; "just over the side."

His crew said, however, that the captain was pulled back just as he was dangling in the water. The storm hit them Sept. 13, the sailors said, and lasted throughout the night.

A glance below deck indicated something of the severity of the storm. The mess steps were torn away and the cabin table, which had been bolted to the floor, was torn loose and dashed to bits.

Youthful Baseball Fan Gets Gift From Rickey

An unusual baseball, autographed by 15 members and the chief executive of the St. Louis Cardinals of the National league, was received yesterday as a birthday present by a Marion boy. The gift is a remembrance of a baseball friendship between A. W. (Bert) Curtis of 625 South Prospect street and Branch Rickey, vice president and part owner of the team, dating back some 28 years to the time the two played on Ohio Wesleyan teams.

The boy, a nephew of Mr. Curtis and one of Marion's younger sports fans, is 11-year-old Charles Elliott, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry S. Elliott of 264 South State street.

Birthday Present

Mr. Curtis wrote to Rickey early in August asking that he send a ball autographed by Joe Medwick, the leading hitter of the National league, and possibly another player so that Charles could have it for his birthday, Aug. 31. The birthday passed, and still no ball. But early this month came a letter stating Rickey had been out of town and would send it as soon as possible.

Under Rickey's signature is the inscription: "To Charles Elliott on his birthday, Aug. 31, 1937."

Rickey and Mr. Curtis played football and baseball on Ohio Wesleyan teams about 1898 and 1899. Rickey, a catcher, advanced to the big leagues and rose to manager of the St. Louis team in a few years.

Sister Deal Recalled

The last time he and Mr. Curtis were together was about 25 years ago when Mr. Rickey passed through here one Saturday night while manager of the team. He told Mr. Curtis he had just signed up one of the greatest players of all time, a young fellow out of college by the name of George Sisler. Sisler later did become a great player.

Rickey is a lover of boys and frequently makes talks over the radio and to boys' clubs. His son also attended Ohio Wesleyan. Another Marion man who attended the school at that time is Earl Smart of 302 Franklin street.

U. S. AND JAPAN AT ODDS OVER WAR

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1 — Japanese-American relations entered a new and unpredictable phase today as the two governments were at odds over whether Japan can be held responsible for injury to Americans or their property in China.

To the United States' emphatic notice that Japan is accountable, the Japanese government has replied with a firm refusal to accept liability.

A diplomatic impasse has resulted, although for the moment the issue is primarily academic. Some observers expressed the belief it will remain so unless a particularly flagrant case of damage to American interests arises in the undeclared Sino-Japanese war.

JAPAN TO WARN POWERS AGAIN

Will Tell Foreigners To Leave Nanking or Face Danger of Renewed Air Raids.

By The Associated Press

SHANGHAI Oct. 1 — Japanese were reported today to be considering a further stringent warning to foreign powers to evacuate Nanking completely or face the danger of even more determined air raids.

The official Central Chinese News agency said the warning was based on the grounds that Japanese efforts to avoid inflicting damage on the interests of third powers at the Chinese capital had caused Japanese planes to be shot down by anti-aircraft guns.

Rear-Admiral Edward J. Marquart, commander of the United States Yangtze river patrol, ordered the patrol ship Guam to Wuhu, 20 miles up the river, to give officers and sailors a chance for shore leave.

Battle Rages at Shanghai

On the northern fringes of Shanghai a bitter battle for the Chinese Chapei section raged into its fourth day with the Chinese defenders holding their lines.

Near the boundary of the international settlement the opposing armies fought hand-to-hand. Throughout the night Japanese artillery pounded the Chapei sector and the north station.

Japanese admitted their "big push" had been halted along almost the whole length of the 25 mile front stretching northwest from the north station.

Chinese Hold Tight

A Japanese army spokesman explained the slow advance in the Lotien sector was due to the extremely strong Chinese defense positions. He declared the only way the Japanese were able to achieve their objectives south of Lotien was by mining a two hundred yard square of reinforced concrete pill boxes.

In North China, however, the spokesman declared Japanese forces had occupied Shohsien, strategic point on the inner Great Wall in Shansi province, and were pushing to the south against Taiyuanfu, the capital of the province.

COURSE IN MACHINE SHOP WORK PLANNED

Night Classes For Men on Program at Harding High School.

A night course of instruction for adults whose work is related to machine shops will be offered again this year by L. H. Rieker, coordinator of vocational instruction at Harding High school, if sufficient interest is shown to justify the course, C. A. Hudson, city superintendent of schools, announced today.

Mr. Rieker has arranged for a meeting Monday night at 7 o'clock in the west study hall of Harding High school for persons interested. Last year 126 persons wanted to take the course, and 40 were finally selected for the instruction.

It is planned to hold two night sessions weekly for a period of 10 weeks in part of a statewide program. The course is open only to men whose daily work is directly related with machine shop skill. The night course was resumed last year after a lapse of several years.

Marriage Meddlers

...idge and Lillian Tell Their ...Husbands About Visit With ...Queen Olga.

MEETINGS UP, Dickybird," Harry Underwood said em... when Lillian had said ...e wanted our husbands to ...n while we did some broad... on the subject of our royal ...ests. "There's dirty work at ...rossroads, and I have a feel... you and I are going to be ...to pay and pay and—"

...wife reached over and ...ked his ear with capable fin...

...on the comedy, old Dear," she said. "This is serious. We have had a chance to tell you before, but Queen Olga sent for us this morning, and told us all her troubles, of which she has beaucoup."

"So that's where you went," her husband commented with an ironic note in his voice. "And what I mean you didn't have a chance to tell me before. You knew where you were going when you drove up the cars, didn't you?"

"We didn't know we were going to see Queen Olga," I struck in. "Mary telephoned me, asking me to come to the hotel at a certain hour—no sooner, no later—and told me nothing about it. But, of course, I knew she wouldn't mind having Lillian come with me."

"Davidia-Johnathania; Casteria-sulluxia," Dicky murmured, and Lillian threw him a withering look. "Will you shut up and let your betters talk?" she demanded, and Dicky spread his hands deprecatingly.

"Licked before we start, Comrade!" he said. "Proceed, ladies, with your tale of woe."

"Here's the dope, taking it in the order given to us," Lillian said, and then told them the whole story of our visit, and the things Queen Olga had told us. They interrupted her but once, when she told of the Queen's request that we should call her Olga and that we permit her to call us by our given names. That intently was too much for their sense of the ludicrous.

"Personally, I think Olga's too formal," Harry Underwood said gravely. "I think I shall call her 'Ollie'."

"'Olgie,' with the soft 'g'," Dicky said firmly. "It's more distinctive, and I think I shall ask her to call me 'Rick'. Of course, with your approval, Sweetheart." He waved an airy hand at me.

"'Hal' is my choice," his friend supplemented. "I've always yearned for somebody to call me 'Hal', and to have a real queen murmuring it."

Harry Admonished

He blew a kiss into the air, and Lillian could not repress a chuckle even as she said sharply:

"I could tell you what the real queen will probably want to call you, only I'm too much of a lady to say it. And if you interrupt us again, either of you, we'll have you interned."

"Okay, Boss!" her husband gibed, but Lillian ignored him loftily and went on with her story, omitting only my offer of sanctuary at the farm for the exiled queen and her daughter.

That, I know, she felt would be a personal question between Dicky and me, and one which should be broached first only when he and I were alone.

But if they were silent during the recital, they were voluble in comment when Lillian had finished. I knew that the story of the hidden jewels in the secret vault beneath the razed castle, and the mystery of the missing emeralds, which had been sewed to the gown of the maid, Felice, who had been killed defending her mistress, had appealed strongly to the sense of the dramatic which both men possess to the nth degree.

Hear Katherine's Theory

"What yarn!" Dicky said, and Harry Underwood echoed the exclamation, then added:

"But I don't believe those emeralds are hopelessly lost."

"Katrina doesn't think so," Lillian said.

"What's her theory?" Harry Underwood asked, suddenly attentive, and I remembered that he always had evinced great respect for Katherine's "little gray cells."

"You tell him, Madge," Lillian said. "I'm hoarse."

I outlined Katherine's theories, with her preference for the one based upon the premise that the maid, Felice, had managed to hide the bag on board the boat during her last hours of separation from her mistresses.

"That sure listens good," Harry Underwood commented. "You ought to put the chief on that," and then Dicky turned to me.

"I've thought of something, old Dear," he said. "If you want to get Olina away from Noel, and if Olga is worrying about where her next plate of pork and beans is coming from, why don't you invite them down to the farm for a stay?"

LET'S HAVE PLAIN ANSWERS

MR. JUSTICE BLACK, who is to speak over the radio tonight at 9:30, has an opportunity to answer once and for all certain questions that have been embarrassing to President Roosevelt, who appointed him to the supreme court; embarrassing to the U. S. senate, which confirmed the appointment; embarrassing to the supreme court, which must accept him as a member; and to the public, which is anxious to keep bigotry out of high places in the government.

Mr. Justice Black has chosen to speak over the radio. That is his privilege. But the people will insist on straight replies to the questions they have been asking about Mr. Black. The New York Times, for instance, editorially says he should give plain answers to these plain questions, and this newspaper believes the Times' list is worth reprinting, as follows:

Is Mr. Black a member of the Ku Klux Klan?

Has he ever been a member of the Klan?

If he is not a member of the Klan, and never has been, what can be said of the documents which allege his membership?

If the documents stand unchallenged, and it is true that he is a member or a former member of the Klan, what explanation can be given for his failure to inform the President of that fact and what reason can be offered for his silence when the senate was assured that he had no connection with the Klan?

These are plain questions, in which the American people have a legitimate and immediate public interest, and they deserve plain answers.

The Hard Way.

THE Japanese know what the world is saying about their policy of terrorizing sections of China's population. Formal disapproval of the League of Nations may help them to see their position more clearly, however.

By indiscriminate bombing of civilian population in unfortified cities, by uses of guns against persons with no means of self defense and by violent invasion of a country not at war with them, Japanese militarists have made themselves the up-to-date symbols of barbarism.

They will recall, many of them, that similar ruthlessness on the part of German's warlords turned world opinion against their cause in the World war. They will recall that the bombing of Madrid and other Spanish towns by Franco's fighters has stamped them as terrorists. They will recall that Italy, with its superior organization and implements, went to Ethiopia not as a conquering hero, but a bully.

It continues to be true, as Japan has been reminded by Chinese leaders, themselves, that there was no way to prevent peaceful and profitable penetration of China by Japanese commercial interests. For reasons which will be hard to explain to their children, Japan's warlords have chosen, instead, to invade with guns, bombs and terror, sowing seeds of hate and opprobrium that will curse them for generations to come.

Devotion.

DEATH, ending 67 months of vigilance at the bedside of Patricia Maguire, Chicago's tragic "sleeping beauty," closed an amazing record of devotion.

The mysterious sickness with which Miss Maguire was afflicted early in 1932 and the coma in which she existed for nearly six years made her an object of pity all over the world. A heavy responsibility was placed on her family.

Hope never was abandoned for her recovery. Her mother, her doctor, her sister, her step father, all worked tirelessly to keep her alive, to make her get well and to find her place in the world again.

They showed rare devotion—so rare that it stands as a beautiful memorial to all the human beings who, day after day, bear their crosses uncomplainingly, serving instead of being served.

Diplomatic and Naval Circles Finally Straighten Out President's Error Regarding Nationals.

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1—American diplomacy is getting itself a little better adjusted to the growing necessity of a more consistent tone to the Japanese and Chinese governments on their disregard of the rights of nationals of other countries caught in the war zones.

When President Roosevelt, on the labor day week-end, announced in a press interview that Americans who stayed in the Far East war zones would do so at their own risk, the criticism of his course was that it was not accompanied by a warning at the same time that the Japanese and Chinese governments would be held responsible for losses of American lives and property. It turns out now that the department of state had made protests before Mr. Roosevelt's press interview occurred and that the Japanese government had flatly rejected the viewpoint expressed by our department of state.

Perhaps the American attitude would have been better understood if the terms of the Japanese reply, which it now develops came on August 21, had been made public. But what is most important is that the position of the United States government now has been made public and along with it a splendidly phrased statement by Admiral Yarnell, commander in chief of the Asiatic fleet of the United States navy, which, of course, has the full approval of the department of state and the President. The statement by Admiral Yarnell is well worth quoting.

"The policy of the commander in chief during the present emergency is to employ United States naval forces under his command so as to offer all possible protection and assistance to our nationals where needed. Naval vessels will be stationed in ports where American citizens are concentrated and will remain there until it is no longer possible or necessary to protect them or until they have been evacuated.

"This policy based on our duties and obligations will be continued as long as the present controversy between China and Japan exists and will continue in full force even after our nationals have been warned to leave China and after an opportunity to leave has been given. Most American citizens now in China are engaged in business or professions which are their only means of livelihood. These persons are unwilling to leave until their businesses have been destroyed or they are forced to leave due to actual physical danger. Until such time comes our naval forces cannot be withdrawn without failure in our duty and without bringing great discredit of the United States navy. In giving assistance and protection our naval forces may at times be exposed to dangers which will in most cases be slight but in any case these risks must be 'accepted.'"

Historic Position

No better statement could have been issued. It expresses the historic position of the United States in international law and custom and meets fully the criticism of President Roosevelt's impromptu statement to the press which was so widely construed abroad as an abandonment of our nationals. About two weeks before the Yarnell statement came out, this correspondent wrote:

It is the implication to be drawn from the President's stay-at-your-own-risk remarks which will cause uneasiness all over the world wherever American citizens happen to be unless the President's statement is soon supplemented by a strongly worded document promising at least diplomatic protection as well as physical facilities for evacuation for those caught in war areas by circumstances beyond their own control.

When the administration does modify its policy or reveals that it has taken action which meets public criticism, it is only fair that attention be drawn to such change by those who voiced criticism. It is also important to record the fact that Mr. Roosevelt has refrained from discussing the Japanese-Chinese situation in any offhand comments to the press and that all the departments of the government concerned are collaborating in whatever pronouncements are made.

There was for a time some doubt as to whether Admiral Yarnell was speaking for the navy alone or whether his remarks had been approved by the secretary of the navy and by the President. It would be incredible if a naval officer made a statement like that quoted above and made public as a news release at the navy department here if the pronouncement were not in accord with the President's own wishes.

To Mr. Roosevelt as much as anybody else must go the credit for authorizing the publication of the statement by Admiral Yarnell, and it is not a difficult inference to draw that the Japanese government has taken due cognizance of the nature of the vital sentences uttered by the commander in chief of our Asiatic fleet.

Japs Shock World

The assault on innocent men, women and children by the Japanese has shocked the world. It has set the Japanese back fifty years in world esteem. Barbarities and cruelties are part of war to be sure, but they are usually excesses committed here and there by subordinate officers or by overzealous commanders. The spectacle of a so-called major power issuing orders to bomb non-combatants is so horrible that now the rest of the world can ever think in terms of respect again for the Japanese government is difficult to imagine. The Japanese may not care today for the respect of mankind, but the time will come when the Tokio authorities will wish they had followed a better policy of public relations. They will become aroused to world protest when it is too late to make amends. World opinion against the Japanese may some day take the form of a general boycott by the British, French and Americans against Japanese goods and against the extension of credits. The demand of public opinion for a strict enforcement of our own neutrality laws against the shipment of munitions to the Japanese or the extension of credits is growing and it may be applied at a time when the European governments decide to take concerted action.

On the Record

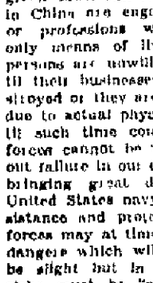
Now That Speeches Have Been Made, We Find Germany and Italy Are Great Democracies.

By DOROTHY THOMPSON

NEW YORK, Oct. 1—I've been reading the speeches that Hitler and Mussolini made at the big party that they got up in their own honor in Berlin on Tuesday, and it seems that you and I have been all wrong. These men are not dictators. They are great democrats. And the governments which they have created are "the greatest and soundest democracies which exist in the world today." Mussolini said so. He said, "No governments in the world enjoy the confidence of their peoples as much as the Italian and German governments."

In other words, Mussolini and Hitler have the masses with them, and a mandate from the people, and that makes their government's democratic.

Also, Mussolini made it plain that the pass-key to the Palazzo Venetia is in his own pocket and politics in Italy is not dominated "by the great powers of capitalism, by secret societies and political groups that work against each other, under the pretext of so-called inalienable rights." On the contrary, "in Germany and Italy it is absolutely impossible that politics be interfered with or influenced by private persons."



Dorothy Thompson

This brief speech of Mussolini's is really aillumination of the spirit and philosophy of Fascism. The one exception is that the leader, or the Duce acts exclusively in the interest of the general welfare as contrasted with the selfish motives of special groups, such as the great powers of capitalism. "Private persons" have no political existence, only the national totalitarian or collective. The leader is the symbol and incorporation of this collective, and between him and it there exists a mystical compact by which he is their perfect expression and they his complete responsibility. The idea of this compact between the masses and a man is the very soul of Fascism, and it is from this that it derives whatever psychological power it has.

I suppose that it has its roots in religious inheritance, in a time when the hold of religion has been greatly weakened. The important thing about it is that it is totally irrational. The world would understand Fascism a great deal better and be much better able to guard against it if our friends of the left had not been so bent on interpreting it as a capitalist plot, and therefore attributing to it qualities of reason, even if of evil reason.

What Fascism really implies is the dissolution of the individual soul, will and mind into the communal or collective soul, will and mind, made manifest in a personality. That is what makes the Communist and the Fascist so remarkably alike. And the enemy of Fascism is not the masses but the people—those "private persons," individually or in aggregate, who insist on calling their souls their own. The enemy of Fascism is reason. Its enemy, also, is religion, which evokes loyalty to concepts above the state, above race, empire and class. Its enemy is humanism, which insists that personality is sacred, and that man is a being capable of constant development. Its enemies are all those manifestations of the human spirit which derive from profound personal experience—art, for instance, and thought.

These are really the enemies with which Mussolini and Hitler have to contend in this world, and they know it. In their speeches, with their constant protests of peace, they speak always of enemies. The enemy that they paint on the wall is Bolshevism. But nowhere yet have the actual assaults of Fascism been upon Bolshevism. That has been merely the mask under which they strike, everywhere, ideological and actual assaults upon human freedom. Japan is not fighting Bolshevism in China, but is fighting the Chinese leader who fought Bolshevism. Italy and German are not fighting Bolshevism in Spain, but

Jim Farley's Future

Various Reasons Appear To Explain Why He Might Prefer Entering Private Employment.

By PRESTON GROVE

WASHINGTON, Oct 1—Jim Farley's reported decision to quit the government and become an economic nobleman, if not quite a royalist, ought to rescue him from a host of pangs.

The years of the open hand when Farley was the lord high dispenser of federal patronage were pleasant years for a man of his disposition. To the loyal party servants who helped him make the party great he could be liberal without stint, for not in history was there such a prolonged period of the bulging purse.

But the times have changed and the hand that fed the patronage lions must now beat them back. Most of the pie is gone and the man who dispenses what is left for the next three or four years will have to say "No" more often than "Yes."

Farley may have the ability to say "No" and make 'em like it but not in recent years has he had much experience along that line.

Rising Value

A stack of reasons could be given for Farley's decision to leave as early as possible to become (as good report had it) the president of Pierce-Arrow Motor company. Farley may never have measured them all out in his mind in deciding this was the time to go, but his decision turns the light on them, regardless.

First off, his $12,000 a year job as postmaster general isn't fat money for the new Jim Farley. Like many another public servant, his public life has enhanced his value in the private swirl.

It isn't to be denied that Farley was doing fair to middling in the years immediately before he came into the public eye as national Democratic chairman, New York state chairman, and ultimately as postmaster general. But it is not of record that he had attained such standing in the industrial world that he was in line to head a major motor company, albeit he was well known to be a first line salesman.

Before his elevation to the cabinet, he was New York state boxing commissioner, a job he received, by the way, from Governor Al Smith upon the recommendation of Jimmy Walker, ex-mayor. That also was a public office that helped build up the service value of Jim Farley.

Farley has flung himself into public life with zeal and talent, but in return public life has not done badly by him.

There's 1940

A second reason for his present departure from public life is that he isn't averse to one of it. New York will elect a governor next year, and Farley has never indicated he would pass up a job like that just now.

Moreover, he is only 49 and should need no telescope to see the presidential possibilities for himself in 1940, especially if he should win the governorship next year.

And that raises a third point that may come into play in his stride from the rail pouches to the elegance of Pierce-Arrowdom. Genial Jim, the generous giver of patronage as known and loved by Democrats the nation over. But if Genial Jim should stay on during the years of expected retrenchment and become Jim the denier, his lovability might be forgotten when time came in 1940 to pick a man to take the game from the Tigers.

To Farley, life has been a constantly expanding panorama, and if for a time he leaves a steadily shrinking patronage lake to join up with a motor company, it will be right in character.

Timely Question.

City fathers pond the city parking problems. Is parking be forbidden at certain hours in shopping areas? Will parking meters or parking lots ease the difficulty and speed up traffic?

While such questions are being asked, the autos go round and round, says William S. Powell, traffic engineer of Buffalo, N. Y., in the Rotarian Magazine, seeking that which is not to be found, wasting time and gasoline, increasing traffic density by piling up needless mileage, turning additional corners to the consternation of unsuspecting pedestrians. And worst of all doing all this extra traveling with the attention of the driver distracted by the quest for space.

"It is the downtown retail merchant," he continues, "who seems most oblivious to the powers of his position. He blandly permits smaller rival establishments in less congested suburbs to flourish on the trade of shoppers who are loath to brave the hazards of downtown traffic. Rare is the downtown merchant who will provide to his store by free parking in an adjacent vacant lot or free bus transportation from a more distant parking space to the store."

Some cities are experimenting successfully with metered parking, but, according to Mr. Powell, "metered parking is not a final solution to the problem: it needs a fundamental change in city planning. One school of thinkers, looking far ahead, forecasts a decentralization of industry, with small, airy communities gradually replacing great cities. Another solution supersedes, with many businesses housed in monumental structures large enough to accommodate motoring tenants and customers."

But, irrespective of the school used, says this traffic authority, rebuilding will be essential. "We'll clear a whole city block and it we will construct a fringe of attractive small shops fronting not only on the surrounding streets, but also on an inner court sheltered from the weather and served from a transparent roof. A system walk will give a rear entrance access to all the stores, which will have display windows as well as those on the street side. Private driveway entrances will open on this court from at least two sides. If there's a demand for it, we will erect a garage in this central area. All these will so contribute to the popularity of our enterprise that everybody will wonder why it wasn't done before."

Clips have been invented to hold plates and cup and saucer on a biker's walk of miles to convert it into a dining table.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1—Thoughts while strolling: Outsiders walked off with the two most famous glamour girls—Tallulah Bankhead and Miriam Hopkins.—No one can out-smile Milton Berle. Alfred P. Sloane is a ringer for Connie Mack 30 years ago. Brief cases have gone the way of the walking stick.

Guess for the next Republican presidential nominee: Senator Vandenberg of Michigan. Add genuine dog lovers. Gabriel Heatter, the ace radio commentator. Swell philosophy: My grandmother used to say "It wasn't even raining when Noah built the ark." Married and pals: Bugs Baer and the Mrs.

When there's better publicity in Hollywood Samuel Goldwyn will get it. For the modern historian: The Waldorf has the only bar in the city exclusive for men. Paradox: The surest and least talkative of all radio artists away from the "mike" is Gracie Allen, bless her.

Rhyme: Damon Runyon is certainly a gun. fun. For that come-hither look, my vote as usual goes to Joan Crawford. What's become of Earl Carroll's brother Jim? Buff Cobb could pass for Alice Brady of ten years ago. Radio voices: Raymond G. Swing and Alexander Woollcott.

For a bushy hair contest, Jay C. Flippen and Jim Tully. Bradshaw Crandall, who paints those pretty magazine cover girls and never had an art lesson. What a gift! Neat trick if you can do it. Passing the Empire Tower, stop suddenly, glance to the top and walk on without swaying.

London night crowds have been in high stitches over the antics of Frank Libuse, the track waiter who does everything cock-eyed. He first appeared in Vincent Lopez's night club several years ago and later featured at banquets. A sad-faced fellow, he stands at the entrance and from the start does everything wrong. He shows guests to the wrong table, hands them menus upside down and pulls up a chair from a nearby table to use while taking their order. Sometimes angry patrons chase him around the room. But in the end they realize it is good fun and enjoy watching the next victim.

The most battle-scarred veteran of the night clubs in New York, Paris and London is Bee Livingston, now in her 50's, who is planning another invasion of the bottle-fronts. She had a brief jet of speakeasy prosperity during the latter days of prohibition, when her private residence grotto was one of the spots of the town-spenders. But after several raids her career zig-zagged in the manner of a runaway seismograph. Now she is going to have another try.

I met Belle in a red plush, lamp gift and mirrory Left Bank bistro called The Chicago Inn on the avenue de la Bordonnais, long before she came to America. She was then well known to all the night life crowd, especially around Harry's Bar. And equally known to the night haunts of London. Ray Long had her write some of her experiences in the Cosmopolitan and thus spread her fame in America. Kansas born, she immediately came home and cashed in on her sudden celebrity.

It strikes me most of us about ripe for the other cone should go in a little more for quartetting now and then. During a rain the other afternoon I joined a group of roysterers who were running through some old songs. It was my first burst of harmony since a moonlighty night on Miami Beach about ten years ago with Kin Hubbard handling the lead, George Ade the bass, Frank Shutts the tenor, while I attended to the discords. Unless we forget the next once in awhile and put on a paper hat our faces get too long.

Lindbergh, Scientist

BY ARTHUR MANWELL
International News Writer

LONDON, Oct 1—Report that Charles A. Lindbergh is about to purchase a small Breton island off the coast of Britain and there devote himself to scientific research indicates that the Lone Eagle has practically given up aviation and started on a new chapter of his career.

There are few instances in history of such a celebrity retiring from public life, switching his attention to an interest entirely different from that in which he distinguished himself, and going into virtual seclusion while still a young man.

Those who were at first inclined to look upon his medical experiments as dilettantism have long since been convinced of his earnestness and talent by the ingenious artificial heart which he and Dr. Alexis Carrel contrived.

LINDBERGH

Under tutelage of the eminent Carrel, Lindbergh turned from the aviation activities and became a bioscientist, setting upon the problem of constructing a mechanical device which could keep human organs alive after their removal from the body.

Prior to 1935 this was not possible, for though Carrel had discovered a fluid which would sustain life of the organs, a satisfactory means of maintaining normal arterial circulation was not devised.

Then, in 1935, the Journal of Experimental Medicine carried a modest report of the "Lindbergh heart," a new perfusion device for providing proper circulation. Since that time the heart has been perfected until it is now possible to study many organs under normal body conditions, despite the fact that they have been removed.

It is even thought that the time will come when certain diseases glands will be taken from body, treated, and reinserted. This process, perhaps, will prove the chief utility of Lindbergh's discovery.

Carrel Nobel Winner

Like his associate, Carrel Lindbergh is interested in stretching the average span of human life. Maintenance of tissues and organs alive outside of the human body may be a major step in that direction.

CARREL

Carrel, noted for his transplantation of organs from one body to another, won a Nobel award 25 years ago for his physiological experiments. His technique apparently has given immortal life to a bit of tissue from the heart of a chicken, tissue which is alive today after more than 30 years of "artificial" existence.

No one knows what line the future studies of Carrel and Lindbergh will take. With his customary reticence, the ex-aviator has not made his plans public.

Even if the remainder of his experiments should fail, the "Lone Eagle" will go down in human history as one who demonstrated marked talents in two widely-separated fields of endeavor.

Today in Ohio History

When the government of the northwest territory was established it was first necessary to organize the functions of the legislative council, which, together with the governor, was charged with the duty of enacting laws for the territory.

Though three legislative councils did not meet until 1798 to pass laws closely affecting the everyday lives of the people, on Oct. 1, 1788 a number of important laws went into effect, such as laws concerning defalcation, orphan's court, relief of the poor, probation of wills, remedies in equity and laws of that nature.

The prosecutor said Grossglaus will work not only with the sheriff but also would cooperate with other law enforcement agencies including the police departments in Canton, Alliance and Massillon When Grossglaus begins his new duties he will confer with the sheriff and heads of the police departments of those cities to outline a program of mutual understanding and cooperations

His work is expected to eliminate the expenditure of funds by the prosecutor and sheriff in the employment of private persons for fingerprint services and undercover investigation

U. S. LAWYERS SEEK BLACK COMPROMISE

Want Resolution Acceptable to All After Rejecting Investigation Proposal.

By The Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 1—A resolutions committee tackled the Justice Black question today in search of a compromise which may bring an American Bar association expression on the latest supreme court appointment.

Whatever the committee decided seemed destined to plunge the bar assembly back into the wrangle which ended yesterday in a drive to demand open senate hearings on court appointments and condemn judicial membership in a secret order "actuated by religious and racial animosity."

The assembly itself killed a proposed investigation of the latest appointee (Hugo L. Black) but tossed back to the committee the gnarled problem of drafting an expression acceptable to all. By the narrow majority of 193 to 161 members refused to drop consideration of the question

Regardless of what the assembly does with any new committee recommendation its action must be ratified by the house of delegates before it becomes a formal expression of the bar association

France and Britain were determined to block any move by the Italian premier to sidestep the proposed tri-power conference aimed at forcing prompt withdrawal of the thousands of Italian soldiers fighting for insurgent Spain.

Mrs. Head Will Bring Stories Of Writers' Colony in Reviews

WHILE MRS. DEPEW HEAD of Columbus comes to the Marion County Federation of Women's clubs for the first of her series of 1937-38 book reviews Tuesday evening she will bring with her an atmosphere of the Breadloaf Writers colony in the Green mountains where she spent several weeks this summer, taking a course in literary criticism.

The occasion will mark the opening of the federation season and also will open the fifth series of book reviews to be given here by Mrs. Head, under the auspices of the federation. She will review "North west Passage," by Roberts.

As in former years the reviews will be free to members of the club and club patronesses and also will be open to the public for a small admission charge. The reviews will be given in the Central Christian church, at 8 o'clock.

Visited Author's Home.

Mrs Head prepared her review of "Northwest Passage" in the territory where part of the book is laid, has been all over the scene around Lake Champlaine, and went to Maine and the home of Kenneth Roberts.

She has interesting facts and sidelights to tell of the people who make up the school and the surprises to be found in classroom acquaintanceships. Fletcher Pratt of New York, a journalist who not only writes for American Mercury, Esquire and Coronet but also contributes to other magazines, also is the author of such books as "Ordeal by Fire," a military history of the Civil war, "Hail Caesar," historical, and a new book, "History of the Navy," to be published in 1938, she discovered.

Ann Robinson, a social worker from Baltimore, whose hobby is contests, contributes to the Contest magazine. She has won 170 contests in two years. Housewives win the greatest number of contests she told Mrs. Head. Her interest at the school is poetry.

Marian Murray, art and literary editor of The Hartford, (Conn.) Times, was one of the many interesting people at Mrs. Head's dining table. She is a successful short story writer, and takes copious notes in every session, but these are to help a prisoner in the Connecticut State prison who is interested in writing. His name is Luman Beckett and his stories have appeared in the Atlantic, Harpers, Esquire and Story. This fall he will have on the news stand a new magazine called the Prison Digest which will have articles, poems and stories from prisoners all over the country.

Writer for Children.

In the field of writing for children is Rydena Trinka of North Dakota, who was sent to Czechoslovakia by the Thomas Y. Crowell Co., to write children's stories from that land. Another writer of interest is Rev. Allison Evans, a Welch minister, who has been working in the anthracite coal fields of Pennsylvania. His theme, new in the realm of fiction, is the bootlegging of coal which, according to the author, has become a major racket. His book, which he took to the school for criticism is titled "Devils Ride the Gap."

The most popular woman at the school is Miss Naomi Kirk, a teacher of English in the high school of New Albany, Ind., Mrs. Near says. She is one of the foremost authorities on Keats and has spent several summers at the Macdowell colony in New Hampshire writing a biography of Keats. She will have a section in the DeLuxe edition of Keats which Scribners is bringing out this winter.

James Still, a teacher in the Settlement School of Hindman, Ky., has had 10 short stories published since last March in such magazines as the Atlantic, Scribners, Yale Review, and from 50 to 60 poems in similar publications. Robert Frost, Herbert Aggar, Josephine Johnson, Pulitzer winner with her novel, "Now In November," Archibald MacLeish, Pulitzer poetry prize winner, Gorham Munson who conducts a Writer's workshop, Paul Green, playwright, another Pulitzer prize winner and author of "The Lost Colony," are among those who were at the school during Mrs. Head's several weeks there.

FORTY-ONE

Under Arrest

... boots, Neill crept ... putting his weight ... each step. At ... over the edge of ... other; nobody stir- ... way softly aft over ... deck and around ... the previous oc- ... across from one ... [illegible].

As Neill climbed to the boat deck of the Lincoln he saw the regular watchman's light over on the Monticello, and moving the other way. No danger from him at the present. Neill hastened to the little door in the port engine shaft that he and Janet had so often used. Here a new obstacle faced him. Staples had been bolted through the steel door and its frame, and a padlock put on.

How could he get in? Useless to lower himself over the side when the window was closed. It couldn't be opened from the outside, and he couldn't break it because it was made of plate glass thick enough to withstand high seas. He and Janet had already satisfied themselves that there was no other way into the vessel except by this little door.

The huge ventilators that served the engine room gave him an idea. He had seen the outlets when he had been below. Each was greater than the girth of a man, and there was plenty of rope about. He picked up a strong light line and, fastening the end of the wheel that turned the ventilator, let it fall down inside. Climbing up on the wheel he entered the mouth of the steel tube and lowered himself hand under hand.

He came out in the engine room. He had no flashlight with him now and had to strike matches in order to find the bottom of the steel stairway. Once he was through the door that served the engineers' quarters on E deck, he knew his way. The interior of the ship was as black as a mine. Groping his way through the gallery, the pantries and across the great saloon, he ran up the stairway to D deck, to C deck with his heart in his mouth.

Outside the door of the royal suite, his courage failed him and he hesitated. When he tried the door, it opened in his hands. "Janet! Janet!" he whispered urgently.

Only silence.

He struck a match. The candles were still there and he lighted one. Janet was gone. Steeling his nerves, he looked around and tried to deduce what had happened.

The rooms were in disorder. Everything that he had brought her at different times—the rope, ladder, the bucket, the remains of food and water—was still there. The boy's clothes lay in a heap on the floor of her bedroom; her own clothes were gone.

It was clear the worst had not happened. If she had made away with herself, the window would be open. She had either given herself up, as she had threatened to do, or she had been taken. Anyhow, the bolts on the doors of the suite were all intact and there was no evidence that a struggle had occurred.

Immediately Neill's whole idea was to get out again. It was too slow to pull himself up through the ventilator. He ran up to B deck and unfastening a window let himself out on the promenade. It would make no difference now if he left evidences of his visit behind him.

On deck Neill thought of rousing Captain Beckel and demanding information, but decided against it. It was clear from the darkness and silence enveloping the four ships, that Janet was not being kept aboard. He got back to his skiff without any alarm being raised. Putting his back to the oars, he rowed on down the river.

Reaching the village, he tied his raft to a wharf on the river side and ran across to Longcope's store. There was plenty of excitement there. Though it was nearly two o'clock, there was a crowd around the porch, and more coming every moment. Men were calling to each other.

"The girl has been found!"

"The hell you say! Where?"

"She was hidden on the big ships all the time!"

Anyway, it was a relief to know she was there.

Neill was recognized as he came under the porch lights. "Here's the fellow! Here's the fellow!" they cried. A mutter of rage swept over the crowd. Curses were flung at Neill from out of the dark. Those behind pushed forward and the circle around him narrowed dangerously. He put his back against the door and held them with his eyes.

"Well, what about it?" he said.

Those behind were yelling, but no man within reach ventured to lay hands on him. He backed in and closed it. Virgil dropped a bar in place.

Virgil's leathery face glistened with sweat and excitement and the cigar in his mouth was completely disintegrated. "So it was you!" he gasped. "It was you all the time!"

Neill couldn't stop for Virgil then. Further back in the store he saw the tall figure of Mark Bonniger leaning back against the counter with his head lowered in a gloomy way. He was alone. It was extraordinary to see the self-contained Bonniger in an attitude of dejection.

"Mark!" said Neill.

Bonniger was electrified by the voice. "You! . . . you!" he exclaimed.

In spite of all he had on his mind, Neill had to grin. "Whom were you expecting?" he said.

Bonniger's face expressed a world of amazement. "But I thought—Mattingly said . . ."

"Matting told you that I had flown the coop. He was wrong."

"Well, I'm right glad to see you. Not that I would blame a man for trying to save himself. But to abandon the girl! . . .

"Where is she?" demanded Neill. "What's going on?"

Bonniger jerked his head towards the little office at the back. The door was open and voices could be heard from inside.

"Wilson is trying to break her down," Bonniger said, scowling. "I couldn't face it. Not with a woman . . . and a woman like that! . . . I reckon she had a good right to shoot him. Such a one couldn't do it for money."

Neill's heart warmed towards him. "How did you find her?"

"Wilson and I have been keeping after Buckless. He's a stupid brute, and we finally tripped him up. Everything came out then. Buckless said we would find the girl in room 212 on the Abraham Lincoln."

"Was there . . . any trouble?"

"No. Wilson knocked on the door and told her it was the police and she opened immediately. Asked for time to put on her own clothes, that was all . . . By God! I don't like this job!"

"You know now what my part in it was?" ventured Neill.

Bonniger shrugged. "Buckless tried to protect you, but I could guess it."

"I suppose you blame me for it?"

Bonniger refused to commit himself, but his glance was altogether unfriendly. "Well, anyhow, you are not a quitter," he said grimly.

"Thanks," said Neill.

"Who Is This Man?"

He started back for the office. For a moment he paused outside the door listening. He heard Wilson ask in the rasping voice of the cross-examiner:

"What man helped you?"

Janet quietly replied: "No man helped me."

"Come now, we know there was a man in this. Who is he?"

"No man helped me," she repeated.

"Was it Ford Wheatley?"

"I don't know anybody by that name."

"Who broke in the door of your cabin on the yacht?"

"Mr. Fanning."

"Did you shoot him?"

"No, I fainted."

"That's not true!" rasped Wilson. Neill could stand no more. He pushed his way in. Kettering, Sergeant Wilson and Captain Beckel were seated in three chairs against the far wall with the desk pulled around in front of them. This gave the place the look of a little courtroom. Janet stood facing the judges. Her head was up. The sight of her, so alone, so fragile-looking in the pink evening dress, soiled and rumpled now, hurt Neill like a stab. She was not aware of his entrance. Constable Forsythe stood behind her.

Wilson was evidently at a loss. He scowled at the prisoner and rubbed his lip. Then he turned to Kettering: "Mr. Kettering, you're an experienced cross-examiner. See if you can make her talk."

Kettering smiled. "I don't think it would be proper for me to intervene, sergeant. It's possible I may be called upon to take part in this case. I feel the profoundest sympathy for this young lady, and I should be happy to serve as her counsel, should she so desire."

"Janet!" said Neill softly.

She whirled around and looked at him as at an enemy. "Who is this man?" she demanded of Forsythe.

Neill was staggered.

"Mr. Wheatley," answered the constable.

"What right has he to address me like that?"

"Janet!" cried Neill reproachfully.

"I don't know you," she said, looking him squarely in the eye.

Neill uncovers the murderer, tomorrow.

MEDICAL OFFICERS IN WAR

The regiments sent by Ohio into the Union service in the war between the states were well cared for in a medical and surgical way, and the fact was due to the position taken by the board appointed to pass upon the qualifications of candidates for commissions as medical officers of Ohio regiments.

A few days after the organization of Ohio troops began, Governor Dennison appointed a state medical board to examine all candidates for appointment as surgeon in the volunteer regiments.

This board was mainly responsible for the rule laid down then and rigidly adhered to, that only a person who had been regularly trained for at least 10 years should be eligible for appointment as surgeon. Subsequent war governors changed the personnel of the board, but in the main the high standards established by the first board were maintained.

DOROTHY THOMPSON VIEWS TOPICS OF DAY

have been very effectively creating it.

What gets under Mussolini's skin and Hitler's is the realization that this whole idea of a mystical compact is rejected by the noblest spirits in their own countries. Mussolini could not win Benedetto Croce or Guglielmo Ferrero; Hitler does not impress Thomas Mann, or any single one of his nation's most illumined spirits. Their governments can organize economic and technical forces, but they cannot release the creative spirit. And if, and when, it releases itself it will certainly and surely destroy them.

Nor do they themselves have any simple certainty of the existence of this compact. For if they had, why all the organization, why the fear of the tiniest dissension? Why is a single human being, if he but have courage, a menace—amongst so many millions? Why, in the end, did Hitler have to put Martin Niemoeller, the Berlin Protestant preacher in jail?

But Hitler was right. He had to put him in jail. For the mere fact that a single man can or will stand up and say "I do not believe what you say" is a menace to the compact between the masses and the leader, who, to be justified, must be infallible. The political leader gradually becomes invested with all wisdom and all knowledge and if he is to be the constant expression of the masses he must be so invested. Gradually he assumes the prerogatives of divinity, with which all absolute government invariably comes, eventually, to be invested. And, instead of the political state, you have the theological state.

If it is going to call itself democratic, we had better find another word for what we have and what we want. The inalienable accompaniment of what we consider democracy is freedom—essentially freedom of conscience and derivatively, freedom of expression and of choice, with authority resting in the consensus of many minds, continually functioning. Such democracy is not mass consent to delegate the duty to think.
